INDIAN, YOUNG, POOR

AREA MAN'S DAY IN COURT

A Three-Time Loser . . . to Justice

By JOHN MIKA

The case was tried in Christian Victoria, on the eve of the Feast of Epiphany ending the annual celebration of the birth of the Prince of Peace, whose Sermon on the Mount — remember it?— said such things as:

The Last of a Series

"Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth . . .

"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Well, David Jones is certainly poor and certainly meek and it can be argued that he was persecuted for a righteous society's sake.

He was put there through a smooth system of cash register justice which worked routinely in his case as it has in hundreds more in the past— sending some home with a receipt for a fine and sending those who can't pay quickly into a cell.

As even federal politicians acknowledge, there are three minority groups within our society which are demonstrably oppressed — the young, the poor and the Indians.

David Jones belongs to all three.

Only 18 and already the father of two, his disadvantaged circumstances give him little prospect of steady work and so he maintains his family on a welfare dole.

He probably never should have become a family man. He certainly shouldn't have bought a used car three months ago because he couldn't afford the insurance premium, and he was too inexperienced to realize he couldn't get away without a driver's licence for long.

On Jan. 1 the provincial government's new law on compulsory automobile insurance went into force.

Two days later, a Saturday, David Jones drove from his home off the Malahat and parked in a Victoria shopping plaza lot.

It was a clear transgression of British Columbia's rules against driving without a permit and without insurance.

While daddy was shopping, one of the children in the car released the handbrake, the car rolled back and caused $30 damage when it collided with a neighboring parked car.

Took 10 Minutes to Shatter a Life

And that's when the province of British Columbia began evening up the score it had to settle with David Jones.

The crown, in the form of a Saanich police officer, arrested him and put him in jail for the weekend.

Normally, both charges of no licence and no insurance, result in a summons to court but David Jones was from out-of-town and, even though he had a fixed abode, that may have been the reason for the arrest.

Whatever the reason, the Crown, through the B.C. Motor Vehicles Act, clearly gave the policeman authority to make an arrest if he deemed it warranted in society's interest. So David Jones spent the weekend, separated from his family, in jail.

Next the system brought him up for trial before the Crown's appointed judge.

The public paid a lawyer to prosecute him, but it didn't pay any lawyer to defend him.

His case was the first application in this area of a new law but the smooth impartiality of the system wasn't broken to give any special consideration to this unique event.

Routine always has a timetable so it only took 10 minutes of our court's time, temporarily perhaps permanently, to shatter his life — and his family's.

He pleaded guilty —and there's no doubt that he was. He was sentenced immediately, although the judge usually calls for a pre-sentence report.

Fund Started To Aid Olahs

By BOB MITCHELL

University of Victoria student president Norman Wright today announced plans for a fund-drive to raise a minimum of $3,000 to cover out-of-pocket expenses incurred by Nick and Linda Olah.

The fund-drive is being organized by student councils at Uvic and the University of B.C.

Olah, 21, arrived in Victoria Sunday after jumping bail in San Francisco Saturday night. He was persuaded to fly here by Wright who borrowed $800 to go down and meet him.

Linda Olah, 23, arrived here Monday.

Funds raised in the drive will be used to pay Olah's father the $1,000 he put up for his son's bail, which has now been forfeited.

Olah lost $750 in college tuition fees which he turned over to a San Francisco lawyer to arrange his bail.

Another $800 has to be paid back to two Victoria people who loaned that amount to Wright to make his trip to San Francisco and rescue the couple.

Olah also lost about $700 worth of cameras and lenses which he pawned in San Francisco earlier to get money for living expenses.

Thats a total of $3,200. If the appeal brings in more, Wright said, it will be used to establish a scholarship fund for the couple to enable them to resume college studies next fall.

Organizers also hope to create a second fund for other Canadians who run into legal difficulties with United States draft laws.

In Victoria, Nels Granewall, financial aid officer, University of Victoria;

OFFERS IN

Offers of assistance began coming as early as Wednesday evening as details of the young couple's story was carried by newspapers.

The Vancouver Sun earlier offered the Olahs $500 for exclusive rights on the story, which was published Wednesday. The Times arranged to contribute $100 of that amount to get the story the same day.

Lawyer and former Esquimalt mayor Ray Bryant will represent the Olahs at no cost while they are staying in Victoria.

Wright said Wednesday CTV, whose W-5 film of the Olahs in San Francisco was shown Sunday, had made an offer of $500 to aid them.

The network was to send a cheque to the couple shortly after the film was made, but the cheque hasn't arrived.

Not Dealing For Arctic

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today gave opposition-requested assurance that Canada would not give the United States any degree of control over its water resources, including the Arctic, in exchange for bigger American purchases of Canadian oil.

Trudeau gave the assurance in the Commons in reply to a question by George Hees, former Conservative trade minister.

UNHAPPY START for the new decade — which should contain the best years of her life — came early this month for 19-year-old Ann Jones, infant daughter Jennifer and (not shown) son Martin, when her teenaged husband David was jailed here for three months because he couldn't pay fines for Motor Vehicles Act infractions. To add to Ann's problems, she's pregnant again and has been informed that welfare cheques, the family's sole support at present, will be cut proportionately while David remains in jail. Unconditional Surrender Signed by Biafran Leader

LAGOS (CP) — Biafran leader Maj.-Gen. Philip Effiong signed an unconditional surrender today, formally ending Biafra's 32-month secession.

He pledged support for a single Nigeria on behalf of his people and then embraced Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon, the federal head of state.

Gowon promised a general amnesty and protection for former Biafrans and said:

"We know most of you are dragged into it . . . We can certainly say that this is the end of the war."

Effiong and three other secessionist officers signed the brief surrender document accepting the present 12-state structure of Nigeria which started Lt.-Col. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu's secession in May, 1967.

AS SURPRISE

They met at Dodan barracks, the heavily-guarded general headquarters where Gowon also lives. A five-man Biafran delegation slipped into Lagos, but Effiong's presence came as a surprise.

Effiong took over Biafra's leadership during the weekend after Maj.-Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu, who had led the secessionist province since the start, fled the territory.

In a message from a secret hideout and distributed in Geneva, Ojukwu accused the Nigerians of seeking to bring an iron curtain down around Biafra in order to carry out genocide. He appealed for a neutral force to intervene.

Ojukwu also appealed to the world to help Biafrans who he said were left starving and exhausted by the war.

Reliable sources said the five-man Ibo team received from Gowon renewed assurances for the welfare and security of the Ibos in Nigeria. The Ibos are the main tribe in Biafra.

The Biafran delegation flew into Lagos from Port Harcourt earlier in the day to open armistice talks, and official sources in Lagos said the main subject of first negotiations would be Ibo security and welfare.

There will be no talks yet about constitutional arrangements under which Biafra will resume a place in the Ni-

City May Quit Health Board

Low Staff Level Protested

By JIM HUME

Victoria city's finance committee this morning unanimously endorsed a recommendation that the city pull out of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

The move has come after three years of gentle persuasion failed to convince the provincial government to make public health services a regional function.

Ald. Tom Christie, the city's representative on the health board, bluntly said: "It is a gun at the head of the organization now set up, But it must be done."

Finance committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton agreed.

LONG OVERDUE

"It's long overdue," he said. "This move is absolutely tops. It is a gun and, I for one am very happy to put it up there."

Describing the existing health board system as "an administrative hodge-podge" Christie said most of the blame must be attached to the provincial government.

"Health services are so obviously a regional function," he said. "A prime function of the regional district, yet each time we ask for that we are blocked by the provincial government, our efforts thwarted."

Mayor Courtney Haddock asked Christie to be more gentle in his criticism of the provincial government until "we can be sure they're to blame."

"Have we ever had any meetings with them over this,?" he asked.

TIME AND AGAIN

"Over the past three years we have met continually with them," answered city manager Dennis Young. "We have even been assured that all arrangements have been made to make

OIL DISCOVERY REPORTED IN NORTH

Western and integrated oil stocks experienced sharp gains in active trading today on the Toronto stock market following a report that Imperial Oil has encountered a showing of oil in the Northwest Territories.

In a statement Imperial said the oil had flowed to the surface at its Atkinson Point well 50 miles northeast of Tuktoyaktuk. The oil was found when a drill stem test was conducted Wednesday at about 5,700 feet.

Victoria Walkout 'May Prod Cabinet'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said this morning he is not surprised at the Victoria city move.

"Hopefully this will serve as a prod to the provincial government to transfer health from the informally-constituted metro health board to the region," he said.

"This has been our objective for at least more than two years. Last year a health committee was established at the regional level in anticipation of this.

"It is stalled at the provincial level for reasons that are not known to me."

Asked for comment on the effect of Victoria-paid staff not working in Saanich, he replied "we'll cross that bridge when it comes."

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said "I think we would feel that if we are paying for this service the people of Esquimalt should benefit."

The board's senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, declined comment. Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford was not available for comment this morning.

Also unavailable was the health board's chairman, Mrs. Rubymay Parrott of the Saanich Peninsula School Board.

But at the board's meeting Tuesday, she commented that if Victoria said its health inspectors were only to work within the city "we would be up the creek."

Second Look Taken At Tax Reform Plans

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Edgar Benson today said his tax reform program would not increase inflation significantly if adopted.

But his reply to questions from the Commons finance committee's first hearing on the program contained a hint that he will submit a supplementary explanation soon amending some of the proposals in his original outline tabled last November.

Robert Kaplan (L—Toronto-Don Valley) said there was some concern on how proposed changes would hit the small businessman.

Benson said the matter is open to further study and "we're interested in studying all aspects, and will pay attention to submissions in this regard."

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said the minister has been quoted as saying some sections of the white paper already had been recognized as unworkable. He asked whether Benson could say which ones.

Benson said three areas for possible further study came to mind: the problem of periodic valuation of shares in widely-held corporations, the status of investments in less-developed countries before signing of tax treaties with those countries, and taxing the unbilled time of professionals.

4½ Cents Whittled From Consumer Dollar

But for those on fixed pensions or other forms of fixed income, $100 last month would buy only $95.60 worth of the goods and services most in demand among urban families.

These calculations result from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' announcement Wednesday that its consumer price index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, rose in December to 127.9 from 127.4 in November and 122.3 in December, 1968.

In percentage terms, the increase from December to December was 4.6 per cent. This showed some moderation compared with the year-to-year increases of 5 per cent and more last summer.

Mister Benson is taxin' credulity along with other items.

MEN BANISH WOMAN

She Won't Shut Up

SHOREHAM ON SEA, England (Reuters) — Margaret Colquhoun talked so much at local council meetings here that her 12 male colleagues voted today to banish her.

By a 12-to-5 majority, the 41-year-old housewife was stripped of all her committee jobs.

Her opponents were led by Councillor Brian Phillips who said: "She's a bit of a gas bag."

Mrs. Colquhoun said there had been a plot to silence her because she was investigating council inefficiency and she promised she would disregard the ban.

"The 12 men think I'll be so humiliated I'll be reluctant to speak.

"Well they're wrong. If I wish to speak on an issue, I'm going to."

Young added that recent press reports indicated that the battle on public health lay between the provincial and federal governments "and we are the goats" he added.

The main bone of contention lies in the per capita costs to the various areas within the health board jurisdiction.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt are charged $2.79, $2.66 and $2.61 per capita respectively while Saanich and other areas pay only 30 cents per capita.

TAKE-OVER WANTED

For many months now all municipalities have been pressing for a regional take-over and a fair cost split between all participating areas.

Suggested as a formula was an 8-20 cost sharing program between province and region with the region raising its share via a $1 per capita levy.

To date the provincial government has rejected the formula and has indicated as recently as Wednesday that it will not consider any shuffles in the immediate future.

The out-of-kilter formula now in operation, plus the provincial government's lack of action in finding a solution, created the climate for Victoria's threatened pull-out.

In the preamble to the formal resolution calling for the formation of a separate health unit to serve the city, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, stated:

"The senior medical health officer has publicly expressed his grave concern with respect to the inadequacy of the numbers of staff provided by the government. . . .

"In order to compensate in part for such inadequacy members of the health department of the city are being deployed throughout the area in respect to health services for which the government is responsible.

"As a result health services available to the citizens of Victoria have seriously suffered."

A week today the finance committee will tell city council that enough is enough and recommend that:

- The city manager take immediate steps to confine the activities of the medical health officer (paid by the city) and other officers and employees of the city's health department to the boundaries of the city.
- That the city immediately cease to participate in the functions of the metro health board.
- That negotiations commence immediately with Oak Bay and Esquimalt with the view to re-forming the old Victoria-Esquimalt Union Board of Health.

Health board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, of the Saanich Peninsula School Board, said the health of people in an area is a provincial and federal responsibility, not a municipal one.

"If Victoria does this, really I can see their point. Their health services have been going down because of lack of staff, I don't blame them.

"But it will create a desperate situation for the outlying municipalities who are not able to expend this kind of money. I hope Victoria will give us some time," she said.

gerian federal system, they said. These will be reserved for a future constituent assembly of representatives from Nigeria's 12 states, the sources added.

They arrived a day after a federal announcement over captured Radio Biafra indicated that all organized Biafran resistance had collapsed. In the broadcast, Col. Aid to Fire Hall Snowballs to $1,400

Residents of Port Clements, Queen Charlotte Islands have raised $1,400 since Monday towards construction of a new fire hall and fire truck.

The logging and fishing community on the east side of Graham Island, has a population of 325.

Members of the volunteer fire department had just about completed their fire hall when a blaze gutted the building and destroyed the equipment inside.

An appeal to the municipalities of Greater Victoria to help them find a new truck which could be purchased at a reasonable price, met with immediate response. Central Saanich, Langford and Sooke have made firm offers of used vehicles.

Mrs. Duncan Hooper, of Port Clements, who is spending the week with her mother, Mrs. G. R. Burton, 970 Cowichan, said the community plans to raise between $10,000 and $15,000 towards a new fire hall and truck.

Oronsay Passengers Sought in Victoria

Any Greater Victoria resident or visitor who was aboard the quarantined cruise liner Oronsay in Vancouver should get in touch with the nearest office of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health for immediate medical examination.

This was stated today by senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, following typhoid among some crew members of the ship.

Anyone with the disease would have to be admitted to hospital for treatment, said Dr. Whitbread.

And anyone who has been in contact with someone ill with typhoid would have to be quarantined for examination as possible victims or carriers of the disease.

He described the disease as very severe, communicable and potentially fatal.

Symptoms include a swinging temperature between 99 and 104 degrees, headache, nausea, abdominal pain, diarrhea or constipation, rash all over the body, malaise and severe weakness.

"I certainly hope we don't get it here," he said.

Copper Curb Won't Affect Province

Tighter federal control of export copper effective this week should not affect the B.C. copper mining industry's large dependence on the world market, two mining spokesmen said today.

Tighter federal control of export copper effective this week should not affect the B.C. copper mining industry's large dependence on the world market, two mining spokesmen said today.

However, it remains unclear whether the federal export controls imposed Tuesday apply to scrap and refined copper, to copper ore concentrates, or to all.

If applicable only to finished copper and scrap, the order does not affect the B.C. mining industry, which has no copper refineries and relies on the world market for sales of its concentrates mostly to Japan.

R. W. Falkins, president of Highmont Mining Corp. Ltd., Vancouver, said B.C. producers have always had to obtain export permits for concentrates and felt that the new orders apply only to integrated mining-smelting producers in eastern Canada.

SIMPLE CASE

"I don't think they (U.S. authorities) are terribly unhappy if these guys don't get into the armed forces. That includes Americans and non-Americans as well.

"That's my personal view.

"It makes it easier if they don't have a lot of guys bitching with their officers and sticking up for their rights."

Olah said he was persecuted by U.S. authorities on the basis of his nationality.

In Ottawa Gordon Fairweather, Progressive Conservative spokesman on external affairs, promised to ask the govenment for an explanation of policy on Canadians who become involved with U.S. draft laws.

NO HELP

Olah earlier said he received no assistance from the Canadian consulate in San Francisco.

The Olahs were not smiling very much at a press conference held for them Wednesday afternoon at the University of Victoria.

Events of the last four months, and particularly the last four days, had left them emotionally drained.

"I just want to forget the whole thing," said quietly, seated next to the slender, attractive Ontario-born girl he married last month.

"We've gone through a lot in the last four months."

"It started last August when he and Linda left Brampton, Ont., to visit his father, who was ill in San Francisco.

REUNITED

It ended Monday when he and Linda were re-united in Victoria after a nerve-wracking flight from San Francisco.

His ordeal started when police in San Francisco picked him up in August for an old $2 traffic violation. He was indicted on a charge of failing to report for induction into the U.S. armed forces, with his case due to be heard Feb. 12.

Freed on $1,000 bail which his father raised, he was stabbed in mid-November when he and a friend were held up in San Francisco's Filmore district.

He was on the critical list for three days, and Linda, who had returned to Brampton to work and raise money for his bail, flew to San Francisco to be with him.

They were married Dec. 6 and lived with friends.

REST QUIETLY

It was too soon Wednesday for them to say how they plan to resume living normally. For the time being they just want to rest quietly at a cottage near Victoria.

If he returned to the United States—he doesn't intend to—the young photographer would face charges including draft evasion, fleeing prosecution and bail-jumping.

Olah said Wednesday the only way he could be returned to the U.S. would be if Ottawa co-operated with the FBI in extradition proceedings.

The couple plans to live in anonymity for some time, they said, because FBI agents posing as RCMP officers have been known to harrass American and Canadian draft-dodgers here.

Asked what assistance he had received from the Canadian consulate in San Francisco, Olah replied emphatically:

"None whatsoever."

"I did learn one thing — that there are many other Canadians who are in the same predicament as I was."

When he contacted the consulate he was told that since 1967 it has not been policy to help people involved with the draft.

When he enrolled for a year at a San Francisco high school in 1966 — he was living with his father and step-mother at the time — he was told by school officials he could not graduate unless he enlisted in the draft.

He was not permitted to sign a form stating he did not intend to become an American citizen — the form would have exempted him from the draft.

When indicted for failing to answer his draft call the judge took the unusual step of setting bail at $2,500. It was later dropped to $1,000, but the usual procedure with American draft resistors is to release them on their own recognizance.

FIVE YEARS

The draft-resisting charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

Asked what his chances of aquittal would have been had he remained in San Francisco he said:

"When you consider the fact that I had been fraudulently drafted, then it stands to reason they would have lied on the stand.

"Don't forget this is a country where they gagged and tied a black man in a courtroom," he added, referring to Black Panther leader Bobby Seale, tried last fall in Chicago on conspiracy charges.

He said he had considered fleeing the U.S. before he was contacted by Wright last Saturday, but his chances of success didn't seem very real, especially since he had no money.

FIRST REACTION

Wright had praise for the individuals who co-operated in the rescue of the Olahs. They included persons who loaned him $800 to fly south, students to man phones in Vancouver and Victoria, drivers standing by, ready to cross the U.S. border during a possible emergency, and friends in San Francisco.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Temperatures remained below zero in the central and northern interior today. It was also well below breezing in the extreme southern interior as the cold Arctic air deepens and continues southward into the U.S. Light snow flurries which have been widespread overnight continued today.

On the coast skies were mostly sunny today with only a few showers of rain or snow and these mainly in northern areas.

By Friday a disturbance from the southwest will be near the coast. Rain and snow is forecast for southwestern B.C. Friday with the rain reaching the lower mainland about midday. The disturbance will also drop more snow in the southern interior Friday night.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

One of my friendliest acquaintances phoned me from Montana last week, and he fairly blew the climate into the phone as he described the blizzard that was raging at that very moment. He was warm and cosy, he said, in his cabin on the Gallatin River, and he didn't expect to feel the severe cold when it came down because he would build an inner heat by thinking of his experiences in the Sahara Desert during the Second World War.

The Saharan heat in summertime is intense, he said, and just the thought of it was enough to melt all the snow in the vicinity of the cabin. In the Sahara, the temperature in the daytime goes up to 120, and at night, even though the air temperature declines, the ground and the buildings have never a chance to cool off and are hot as Hades.

He said that when he was in the Sahara and roasting he helped himself to withstand the onslaught of heat by thinking of the frigid cold of a winter night on the Montana plains.

'I Set the Fire,' Quebec Inquest Told

By GUY BAILLARGEON

NOTRE-DAME-DU-LAC, Que. (CP) — "It was I who set the fire," Louis Chiasson told a hushed audience Wednesday at a coroner's inquest into the deaths of 38 old and crippled persons during an early-morning blaze Dec. 2 in a home for the aged.

"I only wanted to set a small fire so that I could put it out and so that everyone would realize how useful I was around the home," said the 64-year-old resident of the home, who served as an unpaid handyman.

The almost whispered statement came after about 90 minutes of harrowing questioning by Cyrille Delage, who was conducting both a coroner's inquest and a fire commissioner's inquiry into the fire, and by Crown counsel Louis Carrier. At the outset of his testimony Chiasson denied any connection with the fire.

Then with dramatic suddenness he said he had set fire to some newspapers in the laundry room of the wooden-frame building in this town 160 miles northeast of Quebec City.

Coroner Delage immediately declared Chiasson criminally responsible for the fire and ordered him to be held pending the laying of a formal charge.

In Quebec province, no charges are laid in cases of violent death until a coroner inquest has been held.

Chiasson, formerly of Miscou, N.B., has been a resident of the destroyed home—Repos du Vieillard—for the last eight years.

The inquest was held in the 675-seat movie theatre of this town of 2,500 on the shores of Lake Temiscouata.

LIGHTS BRIGHT

Sitting between two microphones on the floodlit stage of the packed theatre, Chiasson at first stoutly repudiated statements he had made to police concerning the origin of the fire. Coroner Delage had earlier admitted the statements as evidence.

As Crown counsel Carrier twice went through the police statement paragraph by paragraph, Chiasson agreed with it until the lawyer read a part dealing with responsibility for the fire.

"I loved my old people too much for that," said Chiasson.

Then he said: "I do not know how to read or write and I understand nothing of this whole business."

Coroner Delage then took over the questioning and Chiasson said he had seen rags and newspapers in the home's laundry room shortly before 6 a.m. on the day of the fire.

Mr. Carrier continued to ply Chiasson with questions and the handyman finally mumbled: "Yes, it was I who set the fire."

COMPENSATION TO BE STUDIED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Families Compensation Act will be examined by the newly-formed British Columbia Law Reform Commission when it begins sessions in about six weeks, commission chairman E. Davie Fulton said Wednesday.

Mr. Fulton, former justice minister in the Progressive Conservative government of John Diefenbaker, said the question of whether a person is entitled to financial compensation for the loss of a loved one will be dealt with by the commission, but he declined to say when.

The law, which prevents courts from awarding a surviving partner damages for personal loss in the death of a husband or wife, came under criticism Tuesday by Mr. Justice G. F. Gregory earlier this week in B.C. Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Gregory called the law "harsh and unjust" in awarding Miklos Kovats of Victoria and his two children $28,098 in damages for financial losses resulting from a 1967 traffic accident which killed Mrs. Kovats.

He said it prevented him from awarding Mr. Kovats a penny for "the real loss in the death of a fine wife and mother."

Surrender May Solve Arms Supply Mystery

By Reuters

The end of the Nigerian civil war with the collapse of Biafran resistance has left one key question still shrouded in mystery: Where did Biafra get the arms to keep fighting for 30 months?

Britain and the Soviet Union openly supplied military assistance to the Nigerian federal government in Lagos—in Britain's case despite considerable parliamentary and public concern.

But no country admitted to bolstering Biafra's armed forces by supplying aircraft, tanks, guns or ammunition.

Last month, journalist Francois Debre, son of French Defence Minister Michel Debre, said in a newspaper article that Biafra was being regularly supplied with arms "through a friendly West African country."

HINTS AT FRANCE

Their origin, Debre said, was a secret. But he noted that France was frequently mentioned as the supplier.

Debre's father had rejected such allegations earlier in the year.

Time magazine reported in December, 1968, that perhaps the most important single reason for Biafra's resistance was "a steady infusion of French military aid." It said arms were being flown in "almost nightly from two former French colonies—Gabon and Ivory Coast."

Biafrans maintained there was no truth in reports they were receiving arms from abroad. They said they bought arms on the black market and captured others from federal troops.

Pius Okigbo, Biafra's chief economic adviser, once joked: "We do not want Britain to stop supplying the federal troops, because that is how we get ours."

Portugal also was named as an arms supplier. The Lagos government charged the Portuguese last month with complicity in the civil war.

A Biafran office operated in Lisbon since the early days of the war and supplies of various kinds have been channelled to Biafra through it. But there has never been any confirmation that Lisbon was a major purchasing centre for arms.

FRANCE HAS RIVAL

A London newspaper, The Daily Telegraph, reported last August that South Africa had "begun to rival France as the main supplier of arms for Biafra." The report said South Africa was supplying field guns, mortars and land mines to the Biafrans.

Biafra's air force included a number of light Swedish-built training planes converted to carry rockets. They were reported to have been bought privately and in July, 1969, the Swedish government took action to halt the export of such planes to Biafra.

A flamboyant character, Count Carl Gustav von Rosen, a Swedish land-owner and former stunt flyer, captured world headlines last year by leading bombing raids on federal positions.

There were also unconfirmed reports that some Rhodesians were engaged in flying arms into Biafra but the truth of these reports could not be established.

South Africa twice authorized aid for Biafra in 1968, but never admitted sending arms.

Nigeria Said Cool To Canada Aid Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — The prospect of the government being able to take action to aid victims of the Nigerian civil war receded Wednesday despite intense opposition pressure for new initiatives.

Reports from Lagos, the Nigerian capital, indicated the country's desire to provide the major portion of relief supplies itself.

The Nigerian government rejected relief offers from nations or agencies that had ties with the former rebel territory of Biafa.

These include France, the Vatican-run Caritas agency, and Canada's church-sponsored Canairelief.

The possibility of substantial Canadian aid to the war-torn nation was kept alive, however, by an announcement that Prime Minister Trudeau had sent a personal message to Gen. Yakubu Gowon, the Nigerian head of state.

A spokesman in Mr. Trudeau's office would not comment on the contents of the message but external affairs department sources said it outlined Canada's aid proposals.

SEEKS CONSENT

The note stressed Canada's reluctance to send any supplies in the aftermath of the war without Nigerian consent.

A reply was not expected from Gen. Gowon for at least a couple of days.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons that Brig.-Gen. John Drewry, Canadian military observer in Nigeria, had reported that the condition of Biafran refugees is better than had been expected.

He said Gen. Drewry had visited four towns in the former region of Biafra and found no evidence of atrocities.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield strongly attacked what he called the government's inaction.

It was absurd that masses of people should be in danger of starvation while the rest of the world had supplies available but was not delivering them.

It also was high time, he said, the government began organizing civilized opinion against the potential tragedy in Nigeria.

Andrew Brewin (NDP-Toronto-Greenwood) said the only concrete move by the government has been to pass along a resolution, passed by the Commons Tuesday, which warned of a "desperate emergency food and medical supply situation."

FOREWARNS NEEDS

The government should not shelter behind the soothing words of a military observer. These had been misleading before.

Gerard Laprise Creditiste-Abitibi said Mr. Sharp's statements were completely different from evidence presented Tuesday to the Commons external affairs committee.

The evidence indicated widespread suffering and urgent need for medical supplies in Nigeria, he said.

Also Wednesday, Maj.-Gen. Arthur Wrinch of the Canadian Red Cross told the external affairs committee in a telephone interview from Toronto that the Nigerian Red Cross expects it will need full food rations for 1,500,000 Biafrans.

White Paper, Black Looks

THE REASON, ACCORDING TO Finance Minister Benson, why the proposed federal taxation changes were first issued in the form of a White Paper rather than introduced directly as legislation was that the country should have an opportunity to study and discuss the ideas presented, and offer support or criticism. The wisdom of this approach has become increasingly evident over the past few months, for as the voluminous document was mastered by readers across the country it became evident that there were many very difficult problems involved, and some very questionable methods of levying taxes on the people of Canada.

One of the basic problems of Mr. Benson's offering was that the Ottawa experts who advised and assisted him in the preparation of the White Paper were deeply concerned with its social, or wealth-sharing, aspects as well as with raising money to finance the operations of the government. Some of the proposals run into trouble because of this dual purpose. Certainly they diverge a long way from the simple ideal suggested by Mr. Walter Harris, who was finance minister in Prime Minister St. Laurent's government more than a decade ago. Mr. Harris sees taxation as "the need of a government to finance itself at a given moment, by whatever means are available and can be used with the actual, if grumbling, support of the public generally."

That is, or was, a fair rule of thumb, although the social and economic aspects of today—equalization payments, inflation control, guaranteed income and similar concepts—have added many complications to the simple raising of money for public purposes.

Another important consideration to be kept in mind is the negative effect of any taxation levy. On the positive side a tax will raise revenue; on the negative side it will tend to curb or halt the human activity or the supply of goods which bears the burden of the levy. Thus a customs duty produces revenue but tends to diminish importation of the commodity taxed. An income tax, along with raising revenue, encourages a trend toward forms of income with lower tax rates, or devices to minimize the impact of the levy.

In Canada, which calls for greater amounts of capital for development — and preferably Canadian capital — taxation which tends to discourage domestic investment must show advantages to compensate for this. Taxation which deters home-ownership needs a close look. Taxation which treats higher values due to inflation as profit requires more study. Levies made on profits or gains which are not actually realized by the taxpayer call for further investigation.

The recent months of discussion have revealed to Mr. Benson that there are numerous shortcomings in his proposed taxation system. He admits, in the face of widespread criticism, that some provisions "simply won't work." The question which now faces him is whether enough of his taxation formula can be salvaged to make a viable system or whether a whole new attempt should be made.

Devising an effective and acceptable taxation policy in a period of excessive inflation, rapidly developing economic and social programs, and increasing public involvement in governmental processes, is admittedly a difficult task. But any government measure should be fully justifiable, and Mr. Benson's proposed bill has many hurdles, perhaps insuperable ones, to surmount.

Inadequate Abortion Laws

HALF-HEARTED CHANGES IN Canada's abortion laws have proved less than adequate only eight months after they weathered stormy passage in the House of Commons. Now we are witnessing various campaigns across the country by married women to have the legislation broadened. Very few women faced with an unwanted pregnancy in 1970 enjoy a legal right to decide their own fate.

The abortion sections of the criminal omnibus bill provide that a pregnancy may be ended at the request of a woman if an abortion committee of three or more doctors in an accredited hospital certifies that the woman's life or health would be, or is likely to be, endangered by continuation of the pregnancy.

Abortion opponents say the new law goes far enough, perhaps too far, and few persons would deny that abortion is a clumsy form of birth control. But other forms of birth control, most notably the pill, are becoming suspect. If the law forces a woman to have an unwanted child, then society may end up with the offspring as a ward of the state. While the law can force a pregnant woman to bear her child, it can not force her to love and care for the infant.

Canada's cautious abortion laws reflect a traditional political timidity in the face of 8,342,826 Roman Catholic Canadians listed in the 1961 census (the last time a religious census was taken). The Catholic church had tried at various times over the centuries to view abortion as a punishable offence but did not succeed until 1869 when Pope Pius IX decreed that the human soul enters the fetus at the moment of conception and therefore destruction of the fetus any time during gestation is an act of murder. Politicians obviously cannot ignore the wishes of their constituents on this issue even though there is strong disagreement within the Church itself.

However, the country as a whole has accepted the new abortion law without fuss and bother. It was the politicians who wrangled over it. And now we are left with a typical Canadian compromise that makes most persons unhappy. Some women with unwanted pregnancies can fly to Japan or Sweden for legal abortions; others must stay home and give birth if they wish to remain within the law. Judy LaMarsh described the new abortion legislation before it became law as "namby-pamby, wishy-washy and gutless." Many a Canadian will agree.

Vacancies in the Senate

DESPITE BRAVE TALK ABOUT revitalizing the Senate, 14 vacancies exist in the Red Chamber and the senators are reportedly having some difficulty getting sufficient attendance at committees. It is too soon to speculate on the paucity of appointments under the present government. But Prime Minister Trudeau is on record as favoring an expanded Senate role as a kind of standing federal-provincial conference.

Last February the government announced that the provinces were being invited to nominate senators who would sit in the Upper House as "ambassadors to Ottawa." When Paul Martin was appointed Government House Leader in 1968 he used Churchillian phraseology, pointing out that he had not come to preside over the liquidation of the Senate. And to his credit the Senate has been a livelier place since his appointment. But the only real reform accomplished in recent years has been the imposition of a 75-year age retirement limit on senators appointed after June 2, 1965.

The Senate remains largely a talking place where retired political stalwarts receive their rewards. The standing in the Senate at present is Liberals 61; Conservatives 24; Independent Liberal 1; Independent 2. Among the 14 vacancies, four must be filled in British Columbia under the terms of the British North America Act. If the Senate is to function effectively the vacancies should be filled without delay and without political partisanship. An effective Senate cannot be a Liberal rest home.

". . . and how are you making out with inflation and the unemployment situation . . . the pollution problem . . . how's urban crowding and the housing shortage . . . how's international tension, how's over-taxing and credit buying, how's . . . ?"

FROM QUEBEC

By RICHARD PURSER

New Liberal Track Needed in Leadership

WHILE Quebec entered 1970 with little to cheer about, the year offers one bright ray of hope — and it is due to shine quickly. This is the choice of a new provincial Liberal party leader on January 17. Whoever is elected by the more than 1,600 party delegates who will gather here — Robert Bourassa, Pierre Laporte or Claude Wagner — he will be not only a disappointment to the party but a disaster to the province if he does not put provincial politics on a new track.

Purser

This is not necessarily to favor in advance the election of the Liberals and the defeat of the National Union government when Quebec votes in a general election later this year. But it will be the new Liberal leader's job to see that the electoral debate is run on the basic question of who can best restore order to the Quebec economy, and not on who can most loudly proclaim the uniqueness of Quebec's character and destiny.

The emphasis on the economy causes the greatest pre-convention attention to be given to Mr. Bourassa, the only professional economist among the leadership contenders. He is also young (36), bilingually articulate, runs the most polished leadership campaign (with extraordinary attention paid to the English-speaking community), and is, according to Judy LaMarsh, "sexy."

Economic Realities

Mr. Bourassa is given to spouting harsh economic realities in his speeches. Quebec's poor economic situation, he says, is leading to a youth exodus, especially from depressed areas — 25,000 from Lake St. John in five years, 10,000 a year from Gaspe and Lower St. Lawrence.

Quebec's school commissions alone owe $350 millions, resulting in a dead loss of $30 millions annually in interest. And now the government has added $140 millions in supplements to last April's budget, bringing the whole province ever closer to sliding into the hands of the banks.

Job creation is his principal goal, accompanied by the greatest possible reduction in the non-productive spending by which the government "has multiplied functionaries by thousands, approved prestige expenditures and useless travel, and created a multitude of boards, offices and commissions whose tasks are contradictory and self-annulling."

In 1966, 105,000 new jobs were created in Quebec, but only 3,000 were created in 1968. Within the next five years, 440,000 new jobs must be found or, he says, the people will either leave or take to the streets. That is why his constant theme is the need for importation of investment capital, which he has as much as said he would accept from the devil if necessary. Well, Russia anyway.

Mr. Laporte, publishing his major campaign testament little more than a week before the end of the leadership campaign, picked economic growth and developing French language priority as the two main issues (not that the latter is ignored by Mr. Bourassa). But his main theme was his desire that a government led by himself develop machinery for maintaining what he called a "continuing dialogue" with the voters. One proposal was to issue white papers, a la Benson, well in advance of tabling legislation, to enable public opinion to flow in before committees, etc. The idea was to seek what President Lyndon Johnson used to call a consensus, before he lost it. But Mr. Laporte maintained his escape hatch, admitting that the government must take the responsibility for the final say.

Mr. Wagner has run the lowest keyed campaign, but won a good deal of early popularity by becoming known as the "law and order" candidate (although more in the Richard Nixon than George Wallace sense). He was once a judge and later justice minister. He does not harp on the issue so much now, except to note simply that law and order are prerequisites for a progressive society. The other candidates have not argued the point.

In one speech last month Mr. Wagner said defeat of the Liberals at the next general election would lead Quebec toward anarchy. This in a sense echoes the words of Jean Lesage, who retires after an excellent final performance as opposition leader. He said, in a burst of Christmas cheer, that National Union government means bankruptcy — and economic anarchy will surely lead to other kinds.

FROM LONDON

By DAVID HUMPHREYS

A Need to Bind Up the Ibo Wounds

THE final irony of the tragic Nigerian civil war is that the mass of starving humanity in that sad country must now look abroad for relief. The war which began as an internal dispute ended with the involvement of all the major powers, not always with the most honorable ends.

Britain, France and to some extent the United States have been so involved for political reasons that they feel some obligation, as the Biafran resistance crumbles, to do all in their power now to relieve suffering among the civilians, both innocent and otherwise. Canada and some European countries are in the same position because of their continuing humanitarian interest. Russia, after Britain, the major supplier of arms to Nigeria, is not so concerned about supplying relief.

The Nigerian federal government, which has been forced to accept British and Russian arms for its war purposes has, however, been wary of outside intervention and that attitude is now carried through in its moment of victory, if the present chaos can be called victory.

General Gowon, the federal leader, has warned those now keen to help that they must not infringe on Nigerian sovereignty. But as he accepted the British and Russian arms to fight a three-year civil war, General Gowon must now accept British, American, Canadian and other international aid if very large numbers of people are not to die of nutritional disease and neglect.

The speed with which the British government responded to news of the imminent Biafran collapse was the speed of relief. It was akin to a man vigorously returning to work after being acquitted in court of a distressing case.

British Responsibility

In Britain's case there admittedly has been a burden of responsibility dating from 1898 when Lord Lugard established the boundaries of Nigeria as they existed until the Biafran unilateral secession in 1967. There has been some guilt and shame in Britain, if not in the Wilson government, as arms continued to be supplied for historical and traditional reasons in the face of deep and widespread suffering.

If only Michael Stewart, the foreign secretary, had been more credible in his assurances that everything within reason was being done to relieve suffering while the government supplied arms to bring about the hasty defeat of the secessionists. But right up until yesterday, Mr. Stewart's statement left nagging doubts, even among those who wanted to support him.

What Planning?

"We have been doing contingency planning against a situation such as now appears to have arisen," said Mr. Stewart, the picture of reasonable coolness. But if the contingency planning really took place, why must the government wait now for directions from the Nigerian Red Cross and government about the deployment of aid? And why must Lord Hunt be sent again to Lagos on yet another fact-finding mission?

A contingency plan for the scale of starvation known for some time to be existing in Nigeria requires more than 10 trucks and an aircraft full of medical supplies. And the 10 trucks were not yet purchased Monday afternoon. But judgment of British policy can be suspended until the fruits of the relief operation are evident.

More important now is the prospect for stability and a return to national order in the Nigerian federation, which faces a difficult reconstruction and reconciliation. What is now in store for this troubled state, once the showcase of parliamentary democracy in Africa?

The Ibo tribe, which inhabits almost all of the Biafran secession area, has followed General Ojukwu into a misadventure, apparent for some time, now finally confirmed. In his declaration of secession, on May 30, 1967, General Ojukwu told his followers they had a heritage and a way of life to defend. "We want to preserve our democratic and free institutions as a progressive society unhampered in its progress and development by feudalistic and reactionary forces with which it has been our misfortune to contend all these years."

Three years later the very fabric of Biafran society is practically destroyed. Whatever the merits of the Ibo peoples quarrel with the federation, General Ojukwu has left them completely shattered. It will likely take generations to repair the damage of the bitter civil war.

Magnanimity Essential

Much will depend on the attitude of General Gowon, the federal leader. He has problems on every side. He must show magnanimity in victory towards the Ibos. The Nigerian state cannot be stable while this major articulate tribe is rebellious. He must therefore maintain authority over and discipline in his victorious army. He must contend with the Russians, not known for supplying arms without political strings.

The questions will arise of reward for the federal army and punishment for the Biafran officers and the thankless task of sorting out the prisoners of war and the innocent civilians. How extensive will be the amnesty for secessionists? Initial fears in some quarters of genocide against the Ibos as amatter of policy have been discounted here. What is more probable and fearful is a state of confusion and disorder in which any number of crimes might be concealed.

Hopeful Development

General Gowan will not long be able to delay a return to the source of his country's troubles, the federal constitution. The decree of a 12-state federation set in motion the strife leading to the civil war in 1967. These decrees have yet to be ratified and it would be reasonable for some renewed consitutional discussions to follow a return to stability.

The most hopeful development at present is the news that an Ibo administration is in place within the federal structure to pick up the pieces of Biafra. It is greatly to be hoped that these plans now on paper can be translated into practice and that enough conciliatory spirit is left on both sides to give them a chance to work.

Letters

Not By Dollars Alone

According to the Victoria Times (Jan. 8), Recreation Minister, Ken Kiernan's answer to the rising demand for greater pollution control in B.C. is "Let's not kid ourselves that we can be free of pollution and still have the high level of development and prosperity in B.C. today."

It is amazing that Mr. Kiernan should make such a statement. Surely, as Minister of Recreation, it should be one of his chief aims to keep our land, water and air clean. Yet here he is saying, in effect, — "If you want to continue to be rich and to get richer,—then you'd better be prepared to put up with pollution. To insist on industries and municipalities cleaning up their pollution is going to reduce prosperity in B.C.!" This is not necessarily true, — but even if it were true, what is the use of all the wealth in the world if we are to live in an environment increasingly filled with filth!

The same night Mr. Kiernan spoke to 200 Social Crediters in Campbell River, a panel on pollution in Victoria drew a crowd of 700 people, and 100 people were turned away. The young people, especially are turning against this false sense of values that would poison our water, our soil and our air in order to increase our so-called affluence. More power to them!

Mr. Kiernan ended up by saying, — "If we feel pollution is a priority, then we must be prepared to pay, not just to talk." So be it! I'm willing to pay. I'm sure, if the choice is put to them clearly, the majority of the people of B.C. are willing to pay. "What profiteth it a man if he gain the whole world and strangle in his filth." — Phil. Fawcett, 57 Wellington.

Misleading

I am disgusted at the unnecessary use of the heading "Now it's a fight against bureaucrats," when describing the difficulties of an American born person in getting a Canadian passport (Times 12-1-70). Apparently this is intended to convey the impression that Civil Servants are up to their usual tricks and obstructing law abiding citizens.

However on reading the text it becomes obvious that this American is the victim partly of the San Francisco fire and partly of his own false statement on enlistment in the Canadian Army, as well as his own stubbornness in not making application for citizenship in the manner suggested to him by Civil Service officials.

The fact is, as you surely know, that legislation is made by the people of Canada, through their representatives in Parliament, to suit most of the people most of the time, and many Civil Servants whom you for some reason slightingly refer to as "bureaucrats" spend a good part of their time unravelling for the average citizen the complicated details of the legislation.

Perhaps you will agree that this misleading type of heading is out of place in your newspaper?—An Ordinary Joe.

The Sounds of Silence

By ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON — A man was lounging about the other day, thinking of nothing in particular, when he realized there was something different about life. It was silence. Not a single aircraft engine had screamed through the sky for hours. The rumbling of heavy traffic outside his window was down to a murmur.

He listened, and there was the warble of a bird. He had never noticed that there were songbirds in London in December.

What had happened was a fog. London no longer has the black, impenetrable winter fogs that made it impossible for Holmes to see the end of his pipe; the prohibition on use of soft coal in the area since 1956 has lifted that threat.

But there still are fogs, and this one closed London airport for 24 hours. It was thick enough so that cars crept through the streets, or stayed home.

Silence is a state modern urban man scarcely experiences. The rasp of the pop crooner and the whine of the internal combustion engine accompany him from his rising to his setting. The sudden absence of noise is a psychological shock, like withdrawal from a drug.

Most people are probably so used to constant sound that life without it is unsettling. The typical man was the one seen climbing the Leaning Tower of Pisa with a transistor radio fixed to an ear.

It might as well be faced that those of us who treasure silence are regarded by many of our fellow citizens as cranks. For example, have you ever asked the stewardess to turn off the Muzak that crackles and slimes during the interminable period before takeoff?

"Do what, sir?"

●

"Turn off that music. It's all distorted anyway, and I didn't come here for a concert."

"I'm sorry, sir, the regulations require us to keep the music on until takeoff. It is for your safety and comfort."

"Whose regulations?"

"The company's, sir. Everyone likes music. . . ."

"How do you know? Have you had a vote?"

What is so dispiriting is not just the assault that unselective sound makes on privacy — the point that Harold Ross so valiantly made when he stopped the music at Grand Central Station. It is that the unending waves of noise must deaden our responses, doing us psychological damage of a kind not yet measurable.

Dr. Drank Fraser Darling, in his recent Reith Lectures for the BBC, spoke of the ugliness of our urban landscape causing a form of "psychosomatic disease." He was talking about visual damage. But there can be blighting of the ear as of the eye.

These are concrete questions, really not just cranky speculations. For noise is increasing to the point where even the hardened addict is beginning to complain, and on every side some technological "breakthrough" is being pressed that will make life faster and more efficient at the cost of just a little decibel here and there.

The major threat is, of course, the supersonic transport. That will please the aircraft manufacturers and the British Minister of Technology, Mr. Anthony Wedgwood Benn, who will be pictured looking lean and technological next to the drooping beak of the Concorde.

The only sufferers will be the 99 per cent of the population who will never fly on an SST but can expect sonic booms to shatter their peace.

It is not just the SST. There are many more homely new ways of raising the sound level, such as the huge supertrucks that some interests are seeking permission to run through Britain's cathedral cities.

The supersonic plane is significant for a political reason: It demands central governmental decisions, and it, therefore, provides a clear test of our society's sensitivity to the interest of tranquility.

For the moment the forces of speed and noise are obviously ahead. But the time could be coming when, as Fraser Darling said, we stop automatically preferring "progress" to "that which we truly desire."

What d'ya Mean We're Defensive?

By GEORGE BAIN

Clive Barnes, the dance and drama critic of The New York Times, went to see Love and Maple Syrup and came away saying that it was full of that unusual Canadian defensiveness.

What does he mean, unusual? It may not be the best defensiveness in the world, but it's the best we've got. Does he think we haven't tried? We've spent years at it and all he can think to say about it is that it's unusual.

I don't think we're ever going to be able to please some people.

He also says that "Canada is a country that is neither the United States nor Great Britain. It is not even France. And it seems sad about it all. Strange."

What kind of crack is that to make? How would he like it if he wasn't either British or American? (Actually, Mr. Barnes is a transplanted Brit, whatever that makes him.) We know we aren't either British or American; we don't need him to tell us.

We may not know much, but at least we know that.

And what does he mean, saying that Canada is "not even France"? Why the "not even"? There's something lofty and patronizing about that, if you ask me, and I only wish I could be sure whether it's us or the French who are being patronized.

Maybe it's true that we're not even France. But we all know that France is one of the great springs from which the twin rivers of the Canadian culture — the Canadian culture, such as it is — flow. We can't help it.

Again, does he think we don't try?

We've got people here who spend their whole lives trying to be British, or American, or French. And if perhaps we don't succeed in making the country one or another of them, perhaps it's because we're too ambitious, trying to be three things at once. Did Mr. Barnes ever think about that?

No, he just rushed off to his typewriter to start tossing around his slurs.

Then, he says that the first number—that is, the first number in the show—is about Canadians being a dull people, and goes on to add, in that sneering way he has, that "too much of the rest of the show seems more in justification of the fact than refutation."

There's no pleasing him, it seems. We're a dull people. OK. So, according to him, the show goes on to prove it, and he isn't satisfied with that, either. That, to my mind, is success. Would he have liked it better if they'd succeeded in disproving it—thereby robbing the thing of its integrity as a mirror of Canada?

But look at what he likes. He speaks about "a certain agreeable assertiveness about sex." If he only knew, we just put that in for the export market. Assertiveness about sex may be agreeable to Mr. Barnes—we know his kind—but he ought to know what he's talking about before he starts saying that's us.

Assertive about sex, indeed. In our house — and most like it that I know of—it's only in about the last six or eight months that we came to grips with the worldwide trend toward permissiveness and stopped spelling it out.

Not, I hasten to add, that it's a subject that comes into the conversation very often.

Anyway, Mr. Barnes says that this agreeable assertiveness about sex, along with a couple of other things he liked, don't make "a substantial enough launching pad for even the most remarkable of cabaret talents".

★

Then he goes on: "It is rather a pity. They seem such friendly people, warm and honest. But that's the way it is."

There you have it again, that sort of dig. What's wrong with being warm and honest? It's nothing to be ashamed of. In any case, since when has it been fair for their little weaknesses? Presumably Mr. Barnes has his faults, too. Maybe we ought to start picking on him.

Then we'd see who was defensive.

Adversary Politics Played in Film Snippets

By DOUGLAS FISHER

The Speaker of the House of Commons, Mr. Lamoureux, has outlawed interviewing of politicians by radio and TV people in the foyer and side halls off the Commons chamber.

The Speaker felt this was undignified, objectionable, etc. He is offering an alternative which the Parliamentary Press Gallery seems to feel is inadequate. This is a basement room, about 12 by 20 feet, where interviews can be done without jamming up the foyer. In effect, it will exclude the mob.

It's been my opinion that the daily pack-chase, following the House question period, was bad for the reputation and the tenor of Parliament. Perhaps the best way to illustrate my reasoning is to go back a few years.

Firstly, a caveat: It is foolish to think there has ever been a golden age of Parliament. The advent of TV and radio may have affected the behavior of politicians but it has not caused blue ruin. Television has popularized federal politics for the nation and that can hardly be bad in a democracy.

The radio-TV emergence around Parliament really took place in the summer of '61 with the Coyne case. Remember the hearings before a Senate committee? Day after day the president of the Bank of Canada carried out a melodramatic defence of himself.

Outstretched Mikes

Around those hearings I first noticed clutches of radio reporters with the ubiquitous tape-recorders. Day after day cameramen were positioned with hand-held or tripod cameras outside the front door of the centre block.

At that time it was terribly hard for cameramen to get permission to shoot within the buildings. But the radio boys were there with outstretched mikes.

The presence of the electronic media came on again with the minority government uproar of 1962. More and more radio reporters were coming into the gallery. The CBC staff for both radio and television was burgeoning and CTV was into the act.

There never was much dignity or class for the knots of reporters who have stalked our prime ministers, but their burgeoning numbers and the demands of the radio reporters began to enrage Lester Pearson when he became prime minister.

He had an official room set up in the east block, with translation service, access for cameras and recorders, etc. This didn't stop the scrimmages.

During the flag debate in '63, the TV cameras made it into the foyer to the front of the chamber. They'd been there before on special occasions like budget night. But now there were many, not just the CBC.

The scene on the long night the flag bill was passed was just as packed and even more tumultuous in the foyer than it was in the House.

Then the scandals began to roil the Pearson years. One day during the Rivard affair there were even cameras in the third-floor corridors.

The culmination of this gradual penetration came in the winter of '68 when the Liberals lost the vote on the budget while Mr. Pearson was vacationing. He boomed back to Ottawa. Here he exploited the electronic media which he detested.

Action in Foyer

He insisted his government need not resign. The country responded overwhelmingly to his instant counter-attack. It was repeated, day after day. There was more action in the foyer by far than there was in the House.

Since then, the adversary nature of our politics has been increasingly played out in vignettes and snippets of film and tape, recorded on a running "ad hoc" basis outside the Commons doors.

How have the politicians reacted to these developments? Most of the backbenchers dislike them. It's simple. They rarely get a shot. The concentration is on the big guns of each party and particularly on the Prime Minister, Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Douglas.

TV and radio reporters haven't the time or patience of the newspaper reporters. Their questions are blunt, direct and obvious. The emphasis is topical, not on depth or detail.

The major politicians dislike the mob scene but they do prefer their own words and faces on the air than a reporter's interpretation.

On the other hand, most of them detest the gambit of "What reply do you make to Mr. So and So who charges that you have acted badly or failed to do . . . etc."

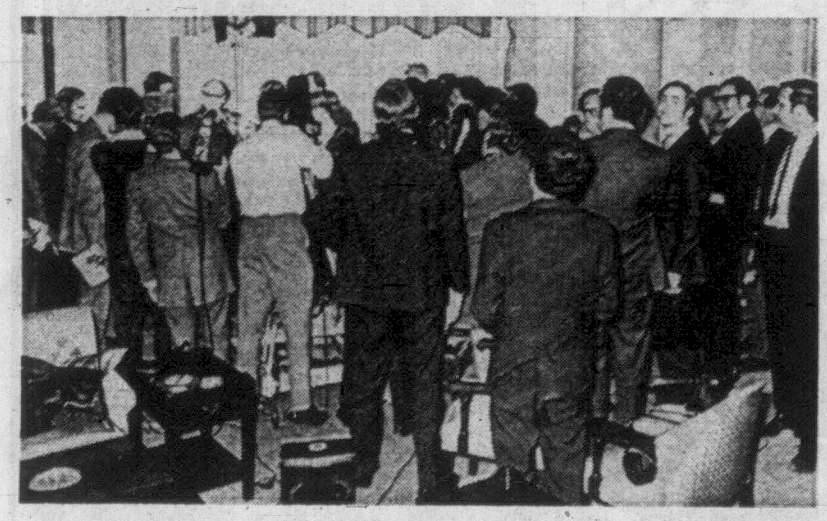
There's an over-simplification, even distortion, in this reportage and facsimile. Further, it makes a mockery out of statements and arguments in the House.

In the past year, the number of radio reporters accredited to the gallery has kept growing. Numbers and competition lead to mob scenes, none of them easy for the participants.

So the Speaker has changed the rules after an inconclusive discussion with the party House leaders, all of whom agreed there was a problem, although none of them had a ready solution.

The long-term answer to this issue lies in a fully taped and filmed coverage of the proceedings of the House. But we're several years away from this. In the interim, the alternative of the basement room seems certain to be unsatisfactory to the men of the newer media.

I predict they'll beat it by waiting in further corridors and by chasing the politicians into their offices after the question period.



The Commons Corridor Crunch

Marine Isopod Is a Scavenger

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL

The sowbug or woodlouse and its cousin the pillbug are familiar creatures to most gardeners and are about the only members of their group known to most persons.

The group to which these backyard residents belong is known as the isopods and it embraces a whole host of creatures that populate the sea and fresh water as well as parts of the land. Most are free-living as vegetarians or scavengers but some are parasitic on other animals and at least one kind, the gribble, is harmful to man since it destroys wood.

Isopods are usually recognized fairly easily. Most of them have a flattened body as if squeezed from above and are more or less oval in outline. The body is divided into a number of segments which permits some species to roll up into a ball. The usual number of legs is seven pair and since they are all about equal in size this feature accounts for the name of the group, isopod, which means "equal foot".

By far the greatest number of species of isopods live in the sea from which we may deduce that this group originated in salt water as undoubtedly did the ancestors of all anthropods.

Marine isopods are largely scavengers picking up whatever they can find to eat and since they are generally not very active they tend to resemble their particular habitat. Many live among seaweed and these are usually colored green or brown like the plant they are setting on. If they are on a stem they always line themselves up with their support so that they are almost invisible.

One group of Pacific coast isopods is very partial to decaying flesh. In some areas they occur in such numbers that they will strip a dead fish to bare bones in a few day's time.

Scientists have found these creatures useful for cleaning skulls or making skeletons; the specimen to be cleaned is enclosed in a wire basket and suspended in isopod-inhabited water until the job is done."

A relative of the flesh-eating forms can sometimes be a pest. Occasionally on sandy beaches, such as at Witty's Lagoon or Sidney Spit, isopods will nip the tender spots between one's toes if one stands too long in one place. The bite is rather uncomfortable but not dangerous.

★ ★ ★

Our most spectacular marine forms don't live in the sea at all but on the rocks above the tide level. These are rather large as isopods go, up to two inches in length, and are often seen scuttling into cracks between boulders or into rock crevices in the so-called "splash zone" of the beach.

While these shore forms are adapted for life out of water they must remain in close contact with the sea and probably enjoy a dip into it from time to time.

The backyard sowbugs and their close relatives have gone one step further. By evolving a gill that can function when moistened with fresh water these creatures have completely divorced themselves from the sea and have spread over the land wherever sufficient dampness for their needs prevails. Nevertheless they still retain the basic characteristics of the group as a whole.

A number of isopods have adopted the "soft life" by becoming parasitic upon other animals. A small local species attacks barnacles, for example, affecting 90 per cent of the individuals in some areas and usually proving fatal.

Members of one family attach themselves to shrimps, lobsters and crabs, some of them forming a tumor-like growth in the gill chamber of the host and preventing normal development. One species has become a superparasites by attaching to a type of barnacle which is already a parasite on a crab!

'He Couldn't Pay for His Freedom'

The penalty was the $250 minimum fine on the insurance infraction, or one month in jail, and a $35 fine added for the licence offence.

David Jones whispered to the court clerk who in turn relayed the message to the judge: he couldn't pay the tariff for freedom!

Routine broke for a moment as the judge checked the law again. And to prove how routinely the case had been treated, he found that the minimum penalty required by the province in lieu of the cash was three months in jail, not one as he had assumed.

The judge reviewed David Jones' financial situation, noting the welfare allotments were needed by his family, he had no extra cash and not much chance of a job.

'Three Months'

The judge said the law required the fine to be paid "forthwith" and, with a shrug to signify his helplessness, he ordered David Jones to jail for three months — because he was too poor to get the same treatment any other guilty person with money could have.

There was no defence lawyer and no probation officer to remind the judge that the law did not in fact require payment "forthwith" and that, surely learning his lesson in such a hard way, David Jones quite likely would not want to drive without insurance again. So if he were given time to sell the car he might be able to afford the fine.

While they led the 18-year-old Indian father back to a cell, another — a white Victorian — came up before the bar of justice and it was fate's one kindness that David Jones probably didn't hear what happened to him.

Debt Payable

Because the next man, who also had violated B.C.'s Motor Vehicles Act but for impaired driving, had been fined $400 which he said he could scrape up if given some extra time. So, thankfully, he left a free man with his debt to society payable in coin on Feb. 1.

Sad? It's a story that happens continuously in this province and elsewhere.

There have been few studies made of the impact of "justice" on the poor — naturally enough, since few powerful people care — but one of them was carried out a few years ago in Saskatchewan at the instigation of Judge Tillie Taylor of Saskatoon.

The survey showed that 36 per cent of the jail population was behind bars because of financial inability to pay fines and in the case of women prisoners, mainly Indian and Metis, it was a staggering 80 per cent.

"They were really incarcerated because they were poor," said Judge Taylor. "Our jails are quite similar to the debtors' prisons of Charles Dickens' time."

There is Hope

And she pointed to a further survey which showed that fully two-thirds of the inmates in federal penitentiaries had first been introduced to jail life while serving terms for lack of money to pay fines.

The situation is not much better for B.C.'s Indians. However, despite a slight case of schizophrenia in the provincial government's attitude toward the problem, there is hope that things will improve with the help of the First Citizens' perpetual fund established by Finance Minister Bennett and administered now for the cabinet by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

The John Howard Society of B.C. hired Jake Thomas, a 22-year-old Indian who had been to university a couple of years, as of Jan. 1 to give moral support, general advice and specific help to other Indians who become involved with the law in Vancouver.

The Vancouver organization is paying for the pilot project after a bitter experience with the provincial government which shrugged off its demand for $20,000 assistance from the perpetual fund.

Sour Note

There is some indication that the government was reacting to the manner of the approach more than anything else but it still strikes a sour note that an injured ego could outweigh the obvious need for assistance.

The John Howard Society of Vancouver Island, a separate entity, happily has had a different response.

Its request for help in hiring an Indian court worker met with agreement just before Christmas. The perpetual fund granted $7,300 this year and the search is now on for a suitable man — although he'll be too late to help David Jones.

The idea grew out of disturbing survey which found that there were five times as many Indians in Vancouver Island's four penal institutions as there should have been on a population percentage basis.

"The Indian who comes in contact with the law often receives different treatment from the non-Indians," Michael Bennett of the local John Howard Society avers.

Overwhelmed

"He often doesn't understand at all what is happening, why he is in trouble or what he should do and simply as a consequence of being overwhelmed by it all, a difference arises in the way he is treated."

Not only Indians but all persons who have been subjected to the unfair impact of fines upon the poor should be protected, a federal study headed by Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet concluded and it "very strongly" recommended last fall that "no one should be imprisoned for mere inability to pay."

Unrealistic

The committee found "a very large percentage of persons incarcerated in provincial institutions are serving terms simply because of their inability to pay fines imposed routinely or according to what has been described as the 'revolving door' and the 'tariff' process."

It made these interesting observations, all of them pertinent to the David Jones case.

"The fact that a fine, however substantial, has been imposed rather than a sentence of imprisonment cannot be considered as anything but an implicit acknowledgment that the offender presents no problem of dangerousness. . .

"Moreover the equation between '$30' and '30 days' is totally unrealistic in times of inflation. . .

"In all cases, a court should be reasonably satisfied that the offender is in a position to pay a fine . . . in the amount contemplated, before the fine is imposed.

"A pre-sentence report would, in many cases, constitute a suitable means test."

The Ouimet report recommended that where a person is unable to pay a fine, procedures should be established to provide a different sentence, grant postponement for payment or a schedule of instalment payments or alter the amount of the fine.

It said jail should follow failure to pay a fine only in cases where the person has the money but defies the sentence.

The attorney-general's department is aware of the inequities and the danger of public disrespect for cash register justice.

DAVID JONES
. . . cashless justice

It has gone some way towards meeting the problem by instituting the "no fines" system for moving vehicle violations which substitutes licence demerits as a penalty to regain respect for the traffic laws at least.

And it has appointed former justice minister E. Davie Fulton, who has positive views on the subject of fair impact of fines as a penalty for offences where jail is not warranted, as the first chairman of B.C.'s law reform commission.

But David Jones is living proof that the department has a long way to go yet because there were other unpalatable aspects of the case, besides the debtors' jail term, which the existing system did nothing to prevent.

Too Young

He was too young and too vulnerable to be left to stand alone facing a court. Surely, his was a classic case which cried out for legal aid as a matter of routine to balance the situation.

David Jones' first encounter with the courts was a poignant tragedy but his life isn't over and it may become much sadder still because of the one-sided "justice" this province gave him.

Most jails are schools for crime, especially for those who believe they have been given a raw deal and are confirmed in that opinion by older inmates who advise them how to get even with a cynical society.

"The committee is of the view that a person experiencing a deep-seated sense of injustice is unlikely to engage in honest self-criticism or identify with the values of those he considers part of an unjust system," the Ouimet report observed after extensive study into this aspect.

Will David Jones blame his predicament on his own all-to human dereliction in meeting the obligations of car ownership or will he blame it on dehumanizing social and economic discrimination.

That's the hidden cost to society of justice turning a blind eye to the poor and it should be weighed against the cost of crowded judges' calendars that would result in a comprehensive provincial legal aid program.

The Ouimet report said a McGill University study showed that an unusually high recidivism rate among 184 persistent criminals was correlated to a rankling sense of injustice because they had no lawyer to defend them the first time.

The report added that a majority of Canadian convictions result from guilty pleas and there is documentation that these are made too often without legal advice by indigents who do not understand the charge or the law.

It also noted that only about 10 per cent of criminal charges in all Canada result in acquittals but in Ontario and Alberta, where lawyers are provided as a matter of right to accused without funds, the average of acquittals is above 35 per cent.

Provincial Matter

The Ouimet report said proof of legal aid's importance in preventing a sense of injustice lay in a survey three months after Ontario adopted its comprehensive program which showed that among both acquitted and convicted persons who had obtained legal aid for their trials "98 per cent . . . felt they had been well represented and that everything had been said or done on their behalf that could have been."

The committee, recognizing that civil legal aid was purely a provincial responsibility under the constitution, recommended that the federal government and provinces at least get together to devise a relatively uniform public legal aid system for all criminal cases and that the Criminal Code be amended to make invalid any trial by indictment where legal aid was denied to any defendant unable to pay for it.

After four years of study of various systems of jurisprudence, Judge Ouimet's report said:

"The committee is of the opinion that legal representation is a matter of right and not an act of grace or an extension of charity; that it is a responsibility of government."

Against Change

While its terms of reference prevented it from making recommendations to provincial governments, it made its feelings clear by praising the Ontario system of civil and criminal legal aid as "one of the best in the world."

Similarly strong endorsement of government-sponsored legal aid was elicited from numerous lawyers and citizen organizations by a B.C. Law Society survey last spring, but one stood out sharply against the tone of the consensus that great change was needed—Chief Justice W. H. Davey of the B.C. appeal court.

From his vantage point as top man on the province's judicial totem pole, he indicated that he had not observed any inherent injustice in the past but could forsee great expense and an administrative logjam in the courts if everyone had unrestricted access to a lawyer.

Curbs

"At the outset, I think in any system of legal aid, the applicant ought not to be able to get aid as a matter of right," wrote Chief Justice Davey.

He proposed two curbs to control the volume of legal aid assistance in any new system — the applicant should have to prove he does not have the money to finance a legal action "and that his problem or case is a meritorious one deserving of assistance.

"Unless limitations of this kind are imposed, application for legal aid will be made by persons well able to pay for it, many of whom will seek to prosecute frivolous claims upon which they are unwilling to risk their own money," he wrote.

He said the system allowing convicts to make appeals in person, eliminating the cost factor of a lawyer, resulted in no more than two-thirds of the criminal appeals coming before his court being legitimate in his opinion.

"I have kept statistics for my own information from July of last year," he wrote.

"Of 468 criminal appeals heard by the Court during that time, 33.9 per cent were frivolous . . . showing a grave abuse of the easy method of bringing criminal appeals under the Code . . . This abuse will grow if the appeallants are able freely to obtain counsel and transcripts for appeal."

He also warned: "The present abuse will be compounded in the trial courts if (legal) counsel is furnished for trial upon request without regard to the merits of the case.

. . . In Your Name

"A wide extension of legal aid similar to that provided in so many of the United States will lead to a heavy and unnecessary financial burden on the treasury and the inability of the Court of Appeal to hear and decide appeals promptly."

The B.C. government likely will make a choice at this session between the positions taken by Chief Justice Davey and Judge Ouimet but whatever new routine may be established for dealing with other David Joneses — it will be done in your name.

So let's hope the cabinet, some of whom are declared newspaper abstainers but devoted scripture readers, take heed of the eloquent three-chapter series written by St. Matthew and known as the Sermon From The Mount which, reports Christ's injunctions:

"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets . . .

"For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

RUGGED, INDIVIDUALISTIC, STATIC

Sea Farmers Wrapped Up in a Shell

In secluded coves and bays along the rugged shores of Canada's West Coast, an individualistic breed of farmer struggles for existence.

The fields of these farmers are the tidal flats, intertidal areas of the sea between high and low tide; their crop is the Pacific oyster.

Oyster farming forms a $900,000-a-year industry in British Columbia, but it's an industry which has remained relatively static for the past few years.

RECLUSIVE NATURE

Some suggest the failure of the industry to reach its full potential is due to a basic reclusive nature found in many of the families that collect and market the edible molluscs.

Others blame a series of contemporary business frustrations.

It was not until 1964 that they banded together to form the B.C. Oyster Growers Association and only last summer they began a concerted marketing drive with formation of Gulf of Georgia Oyster Producers Ltd.

The company was formed primarily to ship oysters east of Ontario, though a sample shipment has gone to Germany, purchased by a group of German food stores.

If any substantial orders resulted from the shipment, "we probably wouldn't be able to handle it," said Edward Timothy of Ladysmith, manager of the Gulf of Georgia operation. Reflecting a basic pessimism found among many of the 27 major growers.

"We have to have time," he said. "A lot depends on whether we want to produce more, there are difficulties."

He believes the industry has a $10,000,000 potential but "it's hard to expand."

"There is no security of tenure and consequently we have no borrowing power at the bank."

Lack of security is the industry's major complaint. Under provincial regulation, growers may lease foreshore areas for 20 years periods. In all, about 3,000 acres are now leased out, but as the leases come up for renewal, they become harder to renew.

Growers must have the permission of all landowners adjacent to the foreshore area before the government will renew a lease.

BAFFLING CRITERIA

Their produce is constantly being inspected by the Department of Health according to criteria which the growers find baffling and fear is arbitrary.

Clive Planta of Saanich carried out a feasibility study for the association in 1968 and his report led to a current federal-provincial investigation of the industry's potential.

Planta cited red tape, pollution, which has rendered about 10 per cent of the oyster beds unusable, and the picking of "fugitive oysters" as major industry complaints.

Under provincial regulations, "maverick pickers" may reap the oyster crops from crown operators with long-term contracts with U.S. companies and, under existing regulations, circumvent sanitation agreements between the two countries, he said.

While fisheries experts try to determine the future of the industry, the operators, described by Planta as "rugged, family-community oriented" people, continue to make what his report calls a comfortable living at an occupation "which places a higher premium on independence of choice . . . and personal satisfaction, but does not fire ambition to make money for money's sake."

Ed is a bearded young man who has worked full-time with his father in the 17-year-old business since he graduated from high school.

He plans to follow the annual routine of seeding, transplanting and harvesting for a livelihood as long as the industty continues to give his family a decent living.

SOOKE COOLER

The deep, cold waters of the cove fronting the small shucking house are a sort of refrigerator, he said. The cove is one of several foreshore leases owned by the Helgesens and here they bring mature oysters from other leases for storage, ensuring a year-round operation that employs up to 20 persons during peak periods of production.

Virtually all of the oysters, several tons unshucked monthly, are sold to a Victoria packing house for shipment to prairie and eastern points.

"We can sell all we can produce," said Ed.

Timothy, who believes the B.C. coastline offers the highest potential oyster yield in Northh America, said the existing industry could not begin to meet a world, or even North American oyster demand.

"And frankly, I don't know if we will ever have the chance to develop to the point where we can meet a much larger market."

Regional Pound Service $24,000 Bargain—Board

DUNCAN — Alex Smith, who was acclaimed chairman of Cowichan Valley Regional Board Wednesday night, told directors it would be a busy year with plenty for everyone to do.

Smith said he was happy he had been called upon to chair the board for a second year and considered it a pre-birthday present. He'll be 70 years old on Saturday.

A request by the SPCA for permission to submit a $24,000 bylaw to the voters for a pound service for the entire district was termed a fantastic bargain but referred to the finance committee for clarification.

Smith was unsure whether the amount would be in addition to grants now paid by participating areas of Duncan, North Cowichan and Lake Cowichan.

The society offered to cover the whole area from the Malahat to beyond Ladysmith and from the coastline to Lake Cowichan and all the unorganized area in between.

One inspector is attempting to cover almost all of it now with the exception of Ladysmith but under an expanded system would want another inspector and an additional vehicle.

All types of domestic animals would be impounded if unlicenced or on the loose although not all would be brought to a central pound but held where taken.

Director Ken McKinnon, who was acclaimed vice-president of the board, said he was not against the proposal but felt it would be impossible to get the bylaw passed.

Director Jim Saunders said the three participators are paying about half that amount now and the price for the whole district seemed unrealistic and a bargain.

A request by Shawnigan Lake improvement district to resubmit a $2,500 bylaw for renovations and upkeep of the community centre and other recreationa facilities was turned back to them because of insufficient signatures.

Director David Laverock said it would take more than 106 residents to convince the minister of municpal affairs that another vote should be taken even before a six-month period had elapsed.

The bylaw was narrowly defeated No. 1.

McKinnon said many voters were unaware that every time a bylaw was prepared, advertised and put to the voters it cost the board about $600.

AWAITS LETTERS

Director H. C. Halliday was told to withold action on hiring an architect or advertising for a manager for the Lake Cowichan ice arena until letters patent had come from the provincial governmet.

The $392,000 arena complex loan authorization bylaw was passed by a wide majority during the December civic elections.

Halliday said more than $200,000 had been pledged for debentures and "more than 90 per cent of these are expected to come through plus a lot more that are standing and waiting." The new arena committee was anxious to get underway.

Secretary Peter Hayward said the letters patent had probably been delayed by the Christmas rush and if they arrived within two weeks before the next monthly board meeting a special meeting would be called to pass them.

Advisory planning commissions will be formed in all areas despite fears by director Bruce Devitt that tit could lead to parochialism and slow down business.

LIMITED MEETINGS

He was assured by planning chairman G. B. Braithwaite it would not mean every director would have to sit at every meeting but only at those held in his own district. The advisory committees would then report to the planning committee.

The regional hospital board meeting was held later and directors passed the 1970 provisional budget of $330,787 which compared with $270,131 in 1969. Based on the provisional budget, a mill rate of 2.25 would be added to local budgets.

St. Mary's School To Close

LADYSMITH — St. Mary's School, which has been operated by the Sisters of Charity since 1923, will close its doors at the end of the present term because of staffing costs, parish school board chairman Orville Delcourt said Wednesday.

Delcourt said the school, which has 87 students enrolled including 36 Indian children, had difficulty in getting staff and could not afford to continue with lay teachers.

Sister Veronica Reddin said the number of persons entering the vocation in all orders had dropped substantially in recent years.

A letter was sent to the school board notifying them of the closing notice and asking that the children become the responsibility of District 67 school board.

Gov't Subsidy To Continue

A provincial subsidy of $1,800 a month to Alberni Marine Transport Ltd. has been extended for a year by the provincial government.

A cabinet order says the "emergency" measure is to ensure the five-time weekly boat transport service into Barkley Sound.

Magistrate Didn't Bite On Teeth-Lining Alibi

COURTENAY — A Courtenay driver who was told by Judge John Ryland that the liners on his teeth "hardly constituted a reservoir for alcohol" was fined $300 and had his licence suspended for two months.

David Morris Brown had pleaded not guilty to the charge of impaired driving despite evidence of a breathalyzer reading of more than .08 per cent.

Brown admitted to having a few drinks Dec. 24 but claimed he was given the reading only 35 minutes after the last drink and the absorbent lining of his special dentures had held the moisture.

Judge Ryland termed Brown's defence "novel and original" but said the teeth lining "hardly constitute a reservoir for for alcohol for over 35 minutes."

Nanaimo Motorist Killed In Car-Truck Collision

CHEMAINUS — John Warde, 85, of 626 Milton Street in Nanaimo was killed late Wednesday night when his car was in collision with a chipper truck on the Trans-Canada Highway south of here.

RCMP said today that Warde was alone in his car which was proceeding north when it struck the side of a Hearsey Transport chipper truck which had stopped at a stop sign.

Date for a coroner's inquiry or inquest is to be set by coroner Thomas Lines of Duncan, police said.

RESTLESS, LAND-HUNGRY, DISILLUSIONED THEY COME

Americans Seeking New Frontiers in Canada

By EDWARD COWAN
New York Times Service

VANDERHOOF, B.C. — Americans, some of them restless, land-hungry or politically disillusioned, have been moving to Canada in record numbers.

In 1969, figures for the first nine months indicate about 22,000 migrated — double the figure for the stable 1960-63 level. The increase was the sixth consecutive. one.

Of the 73,000 immigrants from the United States in the 1964-68 period, about 20,000 headed for British Columbia, a largely unsettled province bigger than California, Oregon and Washinton combined with a population of only 2.1 million.

Quiet Living

Thousands of farmers and others who like open spaces and quiet living have settled in communities like Vanderhoof, a lumber town 320 miles north of the border on the high plateau between the Rockies and the Coast Range. The plateau runs from the Skeena Mountains suth to the Washington line, and Americans are well scattered throughout the area.

Vanderhoof itself was named after an American, Herbert Vanderhoof, a Chicago publicity agent.

In 1908 the Canadian Government, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Canadian Northern Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway engaged Mr. Vanderhoof to conduct a campaign in the U.S. press to draw settlers to Western Canada.

Broad Phenomenon

Making use of farm journals and of his magazine, Canada West, Mr. Vanderhoof was so successful that a second similar contract was signed with him. The B.C. settlement took his name in 1914.

Draft-dogers and deserters have contributed to the new northward migration but the movement appears to be a broader phenomenon.

Scores of interviews over several months have left the impression that the opposition of liberals to the war in Vietnam and the discontent of conservatives with the political trends of the Kennedy-Johnson era have contributed importantly to the decision to come to Canada.

Another common theme among the immigrants is irritation with the population crush in a country now exceeding 204 million and disenchantment with the style of life in the United States.

Economic Future

Finally, and perhaps most significant, is the expectation of great economic opportunity in a resources-rich country.

In other words, Canada may now play the safety-valve role ascribed by the historian Frederick Jackson Turner to the American West in the 19th century. Just as Americans once pushed westward in search of farms, jobs, business opportunities and space to roam, now they are coming north — many of them from the West.

The reaction of Canadians to the American settlers is, largely friendly. Some criticize the cew-commers as aggressive, particularly in busines matters, but others praise their initiative and abilities. Canada, especially the political left, is becoming increasingly nationalistic, and the new nationalism has an anti-American flavor, though that is not usually reflected in attitudes toward individuals.

The fact that some of the Americans retain their citizenship, unlike most of the immigrants from more distaint places, annoys Canadians.

Provincial Power

One of the Americans interviewed, Don Moon, a lean, fair Wyoming native of 32 who moved to Vanderhoof three years ago, commented: "The thing I like up here, the privinces really have some power. Back there, states' rights is really going."

"I think Kennedy was a liberal, to put it mildly, and I'm a conservative," said Ralph Bryan, a 34-year-old sheep raiser. "I didn't like Johnson any better."

Looking back five years, Mr. Bryan, a tall, dark-haired man with square shoulders and jaw, thought politics had been the decisive factor in his decision to come north.

On the other side of the Nechako River, George Schumann, 42, is developing a cattle-feeding and slaughter business on 2,000 acres at a capital cost (excluding land) of at least $100,000. Until two years ago, he owned a big ranch at Wells, Nev.—3,500 beef cattle and 10 sections of land, equivalent to a strip five miles long and two miles wide.

A solidly built mam, Mr. Schumann has blue eyes that gleam when he discusses his philosophy.

Active Churchman

"I attribute a good share of my success to trying to figure out ways other people can make money along with me," he said in a resonant voice with an evangelical lilt.

His plan is to sell half-steers—"cut and wrapped, ready for the table"—directly to consumers.

A Mormon, Mr. Schumann is president of his church's Cariboo District, which stretches across northern British Columbia from the Queen Charlotte Islands to the Rockies and has 1,300 members. Last spring, when one of his six children received a draft notice, Mr. Schumann related, "we sent our son back" and he is in Vietnam.

Fresh Start

Like many of his American neighbors in British Columbia, Mr. Schumann was unhappy with the political trend in the States. "Federal and state regulations are so darn strict down there, they really hamper a man," he said.

Many Americans in western Canada have come for adventure or a less tense atmosphere or better hunting and fishing or just a fresh start in life. Some teach school in the Queen Charlotte Islands, if only for a year or two. Some have gone into welding, real estate and hairdressing. Some work in Vancouver because they want to live in the suburbs, minutes from mountain streams and ski runs. Some like the mild climate of Victoria, where golf is a year-round sport.

In the central plateau Americans bulk large, accounting for perhaps half the 5,200 residents of Vanderhoof. To the west, the Fraser Lake—Burns Lake area is called Little Oregon.

Canadians Behind

The Americans get along well with their neighbors. They visit each other's homes, work together on civic projects, help each other at planting and harvest time and are on the same curling teams in winter.

Some Americans concede that their countrymen are deservedly "resented for acting superior." On the other hand, one American rancher remarked when he arrived a few years ago "Canadians were 20 years behind in farming and cattle-raising techniques."

Elsewhere in Canada Americans are a far smaller proportion of the population. This year's 22,000 immigrants, equivalent to a tenth of one per cent of the national population of 21 million, constitute 15 per cent of a total 1969 immigration or perhaps 160,000.

"They tend to blend into the population," said Milton C. Rewinkel, U.S. Consul-General in Vancouver. "They often stay for a year, and sometimes their best friends don't realize they're not Canadians."

The Americans tend to be drawn to the most prosperous and rapidly expanding provinches—Ontario, which got 8,200 of a 1968 total of 20,422, British Columbia, 4,785, and Alberta 2,512. Quebec, whose economic situation is less robust but which is second to Ontario in U.S. corporate subsiidies, received 2,488.

The other six provinces received fewer than 1,000 each.

Emigration of the Canadian-born to the United States has fallen from 37,000 a year in 1964-65 to an average of 26,000 in 1966-68.

Even in politically conservative central British Columbia, American settlers report resentment of American "corporate power" is growing.

The new nationalism has focused inhospitably on only one group of Americans — university teachers. Several thousand have arrived in recent years, either for ordinary reasons of job opportunities (Canada's universities are expanding rapidly and pay scales are rising), or for political reasons (which usually have to do with the war), or both.

Two professors at Carleton University in Ottawa, Robin Mathews and James Steele, have provoked an intense debate in academic circles with a proposal to limit "foreigners" to a third of the teaching posts in each university department.

Largest Group

Corporation employees are presumably the largest single category of persons moving to Canada from the United States. Of the 1968 total of 20,422, half were classified as workers; 5,064 as professionals, including teachers; 796 as managerial and 1,270 as clerical. The 10,882 persons listed as non-workers presumably were wives, children and aged parents.

Immigration data show a rise not only in draft-age males but also in other age brackets, for men and women. There are probably fewer than 20,000 draft-dogers and deserters in Canada.

Some American families have come at least in part as a hedge against military service for their sons. "We get a lot of applications from people in their forties with teen-age boys," said Ellery H. Post, the officer in charge of the Canadian immigration centre in Calgary.

Opposition to U.S. foreign policy has brought other Americans to Canada. One of them is a Cleveland newspaperman with a seven-year-old son. He took a pay cut in moving to Toronto "to bring up my boy in peace."

DASHING NIGHT FOR PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau sailed gracefully over the ice of the Governor-General's skating rink Wednesday night with a beautiful young redhead on his arm.

She was Margaret Sinclair, 22, daughter of former federal fisheries minister James Sinclair, and the same girl the prime minister took out to dinner in Vancouver last August.

Miss Sinclair said last year that she and the prime minister met in Tahiti and that they were "just friends."

Wednesday, they were among the guests at Governor-General Michener's annual skating party for MPs and senators, held at the outdoor rink on Government House grounds.

WEARS RACCOON COAT

Miss Sinclair wore a tweed maxi-skirt and a fur jacket, a knitted hat and scarf.

Governor-General Michener was among the more active skaters. He wore a Canadian Ski Patrol jacket—he's the honorary patron of the patrol—and ski pants. Also present, but not skating, was a well-muffled-up Mrs. Michener.

Close to 100 MPs and senators braved near-zero temperatures to come to the party, which wound up with hot win, a buffet and dancing, inside Government House.

RC Aid To Poor Urged

Canadian Roman Catholics will be urged to contribute 3 to 5 per cent of their income to help the poor here and abroad.

Parishes and dioceses will also be asked for similar contributions of their ordinary and gross annual incomes as a sign of leadership to the federal government.

The moves were disclosed by Bishop Remi De Roo of Victoria who is attending a western conference of priests in Winnipeg this week.

This is an organization of Roman Catholic priests in western Canada with 300 members, a free association not to be confused with any official church structure, it was said.

CELIBACY

On another matter, a resolution that "priestly celibacy be made optional for priests in the Latin rite" was approved with 82 in favor, 45 in favor but with reservations, 28 against and 17 abstaining.

Bishop De Roo said this was "just a restatement of a resolution they have made before."

A resolution on military chaplaincy was introduced and later withdrawn.

The conference was asked to resolve that "as a sign of hope to a war-weary world," the church renounce military uniforms, rank and government pay for its chaplains to the armed services.

An objection was raised by Rev. Francis Swoboda, a Canadian forces chaplain from Esquimalt, who said "the men in the field, the sailor aboard ship, do not consider clergymen in the black suit and the white collar with the same confidence they would give to a man who is part of them, who is part of the service."

The consensus was that the issue was too complicated for swift passage of a resolution which had not been thoroughly studied.

I am interested in an additional income of:
$2,500 ☐ $5,000 ☐
$7,500 ☐ $10,000 ☐ per year

The Government makes the tax rules.

Start using them and save some money.

You can save up to $2,500 a year of your earned income, watch your money grow, and still have control of it.

The government says in effect "Plan now for your retirement, and we'll allow you to pay as much as $2,500 into a registered retirement savings plan. And we won't tax you on it."

So you merely lower your taxable income by investing up to $2,500 in our registered retirement savings plans.

You save on tax.

And it's not dead. It grows.

For instance, suppose you had invested in our Equity Plan just seven years ago.

By now your money would have more than doubled. (If you're already in a plan and its growth rate can't compare with ours, come on over!).

We also offer you an alternative plan, which guarantees a rate of interest established at the first of March each year.

That's definitely not dead money.

When you withdraw it, of course, you have to pay taxes on it at that time. But this is exactly what's most important.

You pay tax on the money when you choose to pay it.

This has led some to call the plan a tax shelter.

One fellow we know paid into it for five years, watched it grow, then took the bundle out and used it to replace normal income while he lazed in Majorca for six months.

If you care to, you can leave it in till you retire for good.

Either way it's an excellent plan for you.

It's especially valuable because we don't have a lot of salesmen out making calls, therefore you don't have to pay high sales commissions.

All you have to do is call us.

But don't put it off.

The deadline is the end of February. You can't declare any contributions for 1969 after this date.

Do it now.

Fight fire with fire.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Fields

Agreement to merge Fields Stores Ltd. and Hamilton Harvey Ltd. through share exchange has been reached, subject to conditions. The former operates a B.C. chain of department stores and family clothing stores and the latter has two lower mainland department stores.

Fields president Joseph Segal said his firm will acquire 68 per cent of Hamilton Harvey's outstanding common shares on the basis of one Fields for 2¼ Hamilton Harvey. These shares are held by Robert Porter and Osborne McKee, chairman and president of Hamilton Harvey.

An offer would then be made to the remaining Hamilton Harvey shareholders to exchange their holdings on the same basis.

Fields has also bought for cash the family clothing business of McKees Ltd., with three stores in Vancouver.

Boeing Co.

The Boeing Co. work force will decline by a total of about 18,000 persons in the Puget Sound area in 1970, a company spokesman said.

Employment at the aircraft firm totalled about 101,500 here at its peak in 1968 and has been declining at an average of about 1,200 persons per month.

Vice-President Lowell P. Mickelwait blamed the decline on slower commercial aircraft sales, failure to win new government contracts coupled with reduced government spending, virtual completion of the government contracts it holds, and increased productivity in the 747 jumbo jet assembly lines.

Great Canadian

Problems have returned to hamper production at the Fort McMurray refinery of Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd.

The plant is operational, but during the last quarter there were shutdowns caused by difficulties in the plant's process area and output was about 2.6 million barrels, compared with 10 million barrels for the full year, or double 1968 production, when serious difficulties were encountered.

Laurentide

Laurentide Financial Corp. Ltd. has announced it has extended to Feb. 16 the date for acceptance of its offer to purchase all outstanding common shares and participating non-voting second preference shares in Union Acceptance Corp. Ltd.

The offer, made Dec. 9, is for $7 cash per share for each of the two classes of Union Acceptance stock.

In extending the date beyond Jan. 15 closing date, Laurentide said it now owns 87.7 per cent of the combined outstanding common and second preference shares of UAC.

Air Canada

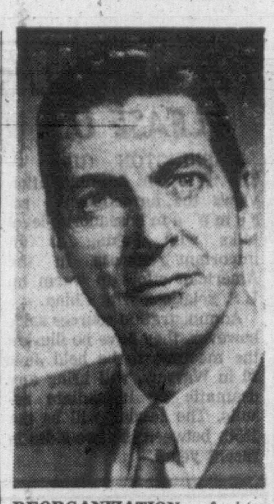
Yves Pratte, chairman and chief executive officer of Air Canada, said the airline will make a small profit on 1969 operations — the 16th time in the last 19 years that a profit has been recorded.

A number of adverse factors affected revenues, among them a 28-day strike last spring, and a rise in labor costs by 7 per cent over those of 1968.

Interprovincial

Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corp. Ltd., reports a net profit for 1969 of $534,037, on the highest sales volume in its history.

The company's annual report said the profit compared with $415,240 in 1968. Its highest recored net profit was $3.4 million in 1966.



REORGANIZATION of its building materials division has been completed by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., which is carrying on under the new title of MacMillan Bloedel Building Materials Ltd. R. A. Swannell (above), formerly business development manager, has been appointed regional manager of the new operations in western Canada. C. M. Dee is general manager of the subsidiary, formerly Canada Building Materials.

U.S. Reported Set to Change Policy on Oil

CALGARY (CP) — President Gene E. Roark of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada said Wednesday he has been notified that President Nixon will be advised to impose a quota of 615,000 barrels a day on imports from Canada effective next Jan. 1.

Roark, president of Husky Oil Ltd., said in an interview he received the information in a telephone call from Washington.

Canada was expected to export an average of 759,000 barrels a day to the U.S. in the first quarter of 1970.

The figures reported by Roark differ from earlier reports from Washington which said a staff committee had urged a U.S. cabinet task force which has been reviewing oil import policy to advise President Nixon to replace the existing U.S. import policy July 1.

Roark said he was told the latest proposal is to control one-third of imports by the application of tariffs during 1971, two thirds during 1972, with the full system of tariff controls taking over Jan. 1, 1973.

Roark said there was no mention made of any penalty to canada if the Canadian quota was exceeded.

Broker, Swiss Bank Indicted in U.S.

NEW YORK (WP) — A former officer of one of the country's largest brokerage firms was indicted Wednesday, along with a Swiss bank and its general manager, or charges of using the bank to violate U.S. securities laws.

The indictments, announced by U.S. attorney Robert M. Morgenthau, Mark the second time that a Swiss bank has been charged with breaking laws in this country. In 1968, the Arzi Bank, of Zurich, was indicted and subsequently convicted of securities violations.

The latest indictment charged that Andre Backar, former first vice-president of Shearson, Hammill and Co., Inc., conspired with the Wiesscredit, Banca Comerciale D'Investmenti, Chiasso, Switzerland, and Rolando Zoppi, the bank's general manager, to extend more than $3 million in illegal credit to customers.

RESIGNED

Shearson, Hammill is the eigth or ninth largest brokerage firm in the country. Backar, who became a first vice-president and voting stockholder in the firm in July, 1968, resigned at the end of last year.

According to the indictment, Backar, who was formerly a member of the Tunisian mission to the United Nations, opened an account at Shearson, Hammill, in the name of the Weiscredit bank, in September, 1966. He then arranged for customers to open accounts at the bank which arranged credit terms calling for payment of as little as 20 per cent of the purchase price of securities. Federal Reserve Board rules require stock buyers to pay at least 80 per cent of the purchase price.

The indictment said that Backar accepted buy and sell orders for the customers, in the name of the bank. After the orders were executed, it said, Backar would notify the bank so that proper bookkeeping entries could be made. The bank paid for the security in full, concealing the financial arrangement it had made with that customer. In all, it said, more than $3 million in credit was extended to the customers.

Jumbo Jet Must Be Modified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boeing 747 jumbo jet failed part of its emergency test and cannot be used commercially until modifications are made, the Federal Avaition Administration said Wednesday—one week before the plane is scheduled to go into regular service for Pan America World Airways.

Modifications will have to be completed and the evacuation procedure approved by the FAA within a week if the plane is to enter scheduled service as planned next Wednesday.

Pan Am had announced that the FAA approved the evacuation procedure after a test at Roswell, N.M., Tuesday in which 370 persons were evacuated from the airplane in 87 seconds.

However, the FAA said later two of the 11 evacuation chutes on the 747 would have to be modified satisfactorily before passengers can be carried.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Time to Think About That April Tax Return

This is a service provided by The Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

By Edgar A. Downey, C. A.

You can file your 1969 individual income tax returns now if you have the necessary information.

There is a vast number of people who have a salary or wages from only one job as their sole source of income. If they have their T4 slip showing the totals for income and tax and pension deductions then they probably have all the data required to prepare their own T1 tax return.

At least it would be worthwhile to take a quick look at the figures. Then, anyone who has a refund to come should make up the return and send it in quickly. The sooner it is filed the sooner it will be processed and the refund cheque could be received within a few weeks.

Most people in such a position usually have no complications in their tax return and can quickly make their own calculations of the same basis as in prior years. There were no significant changes in the rules for 1969 except for the minor increase in the tax calculation which is clearly shown in the form.

However, it is often these very same people who overlook the fact that their paycheque is not really their sole source of income. The interest on their bank savings account is also income and it is subject to tax. With the higher rates of interest paid by the banks in the past year that interest income may be fairly substantial, and it will show up in a T5 slip which the bank will issue by February 28.

Interest on Canada Savings bonds is also income subject to tax and that has already been reported to the Tax Department when the bondholder cashed the coupons and signed the ownership certificates at the bank.

The fact that some people think that interest on government bonds should not be subject to tax does not change the fact that all interest is taxable income, and your own tax return is not the place to carry the banner for tax reform.

Fortunately, in Canada, taxation is imposed by Parliament not by the tax department. So it is futile to blame the tax assessor who merely applies the law as it is set out in the Income Tax Act.

In any event, most tax returns are now assessed by the computer machine, which is sometimes called the "Iron Maiden", and the machine really is impartial.

The recent news reports dealing with the proposed changes in taxation which were announced in the White Paper on Tax Reform do not apply to 1969, and do not in any way affect the individual tax returns which must be filed by April 30, 1970.

Those people who do not yet have their T4 slips cannot do very much about it yet unless they have kept their own detailed records. It is possible to file a tax return without the corresponding T4 slips as long as the information is correctly reported but it is not likely to speed up the refund until the computer has received its copy of the slip to match against the reported income.

Most businesses require time to complete their records for the calendar year so the rules provide two months for them to do this. Employers must report, on or before February 28, 1970, all salaries, wages, commissions, etc., paid in 1969, and give the T4 slip copy of the report to the individual employee. All dividends and interst paid in 1969 must also be reported by that same date and the T5 slip copy must be sent to the individual investor. Of course, some businesses do this long before and so some people can prepare their own tax returns early.

Even if you cannot obtain all your information yet, now is a good time to start gathering it together. Remember the April 30 deadline for personal tax returns, it will come faster than you think.

Victoria Developed From First Bay Fort

By HUMPHRY DAVY

It's no exaggeration to say that Victoria was built around the Hudson's Bay Company which this year is commemorating its 300th anniversary.

And it is no exaggeration to say the company in Victoria, now familiarly known as The Bay, played a major part in creating British Columbia and making Alaska an American state.

In fact, the whole of the Pacific Northwest was largely shaped by the activities of the company which once exercised imperial power over most of Canada.

It all started when the company's able lieutenant, James Douglas, later to become the first governor of the province, chose Victoria as a site for a fort and trading post in 1843.

Douglas had been instructed by Governor Sir George Simpson to establish a new coastal depot because Britain was expected to cede the Oregon territories to the United States, then controlled by the company. A location on Vancouver Island was suggested.

After surveying the Island's coast, Douglas, it seemed, chose Victoria for its agricultural rather than for its fur and military potential. It's climate also impressed him.

In a report to a senior official, Douglas described the vegetation at Victoria as "more luxuriant than other places I have seen in America, indicating a productive soil."

His choice proved a wise one.

The company's venture into farming, apart from trading beads and blankets for furs, enabled the depot to be self-sufficient and also to provide it with commodities for sale to trading vessels.

The productive land also attracted settlers to the area, thus ensuring that the settlement would continue to expand.

HIT RUSSIANS

At that time, the company was involved in a life and death struggle with Russia for control of the Pacific Northwest fur trade.

It first cornered a large part of the trade by establishing posts around the headwaters of larger rivers which emptied in northern Pacific waters. Pelts which normally were taken down the rivers by Indians to Russian trading posts on the coast, such as Sitka, were acquired by the company.

To make matters worse for the Russians, they were entirely dependent for their food supplies on outside sources and actually bought agricultural products from the company's Victoria farms.

The situation became intolerable. They were being "skinned" and fed by their rivals. Finally in 1867 Russia sold Alaska to the United States.

Today, the company can justly claim that Alaska would be a part of the Soviet Union if it had lost the pelt war.

ONCE FARMED

In this age it's hard to believe the company with its large department store on Douglas street was once heavily engaged in farming in the Greater Victoria area.

The Bay's first farm — about five acres — was started when the fort was constructed on a site known today as Bastion Square. It was situated near the depot.

Two years later in 1846, company employees had developed several farms which produced oats, wheat, barley, peas and potatoes.

In all, there were about 160 acres under cultivation but within a few years this was explanded to more than 4,000 acres. There were also three dairy farms, each with 70 milch cows, and a sheep farm at Lakehall with 1,700 sheep. Horses were also bred.

By 1854 Victoria's population was about 432 and most people were dependent on the company.

Employees were engaged in administration, trading, store keeping, farming, lumbering and a host of other jobs.

FORTUNES CHANGED

The company's fortunes changed in 1858 when Victoria became the principal point of entry for thousands of prospectors on their way to the Fraser River gold fields.

Victoria really then began to build around the Bay. It is estimated that 20,000 gold miners landed in the city that year.

As the large influx of settlers and miners required services and goods, the Bay concentrated on the wholesale business and navigation.

In 1859, the company built a warehouse five storey's high with a basement and a sub-basement, to hold merchandise, stocks of food and ammunition. It stood on Wharf Street and for years was a famous landmark.

Around this time, too, the fort was torn down. It had served its purpose.

Farming also gradually ceased to be important and the land was sold to settlers.

It was also during this period that the company became heavily involved in shipping and ran a regular service between the Fraser River and the city.

FAMOUS SHIP

Two of the vessels on this route were the Beaver and the Otter. The former was the most famous because it was the first steamship to operate off the Pacific Northwest coast.

The Beaver in 1843 also brought Douglas to Victoria to superintend the construction of the fort.

The company for a short while also operated a service to San Francisco but this was discontinued when the Labourchere was wrecked on her second voyage.

There was keen rivalry in the shipping business between the company and the Pioneer Line, headed by Capt. John Irving. The rivals finally merged and formed the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company, known for years as the CPN.

SOLD TO CPR

The company in 1901 sold its shipping interest to the Canadian Pacific Railway, thus severing a long link with the past. For nearly 60 years its ships had plied coastal waters and tied up behind the store and warehouse on Wharf Street.

The company's next big enterprise in the city was the construction of a modern department store on Douglas and Fisgard. Construction started in 1912, but the war of 1914-18 intervened and it was not completed until September 19, 1921.

The building was enlarged in 1929 and in 1959 the parkade was added to the building.

So over a period of 128 years, the Bay in Victoria, was involved in trading beads for pelts, farming, real estate, wholesale, shipping and now retailing.

ESKIMOS FEAR STARVATION

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Oil exploration in the Arctic should be halted or at least slowed down, an Eskimo member of the Northwest Territories council said Wednesday.

Simonie of Baffin Island, elected member for the Eastern Arctic, said the possibility of oil discoveries threaten the existence of the Eskimo and the wildlife upon which their survival depends.

•

Eskimos, he said, are concerned about tankers taking oil from the Arctic. A tanker cracked by a collision with ice could release a slick which would be deadly to wildlife for miles around.

"I know . . . starvation is coming. But we're not ready for this yet. They don't care about animals. All they think about is taking oil from the ground."

WARSAW TALKS PLEASE U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nixon administration views the agreement to resume ambassadorial-level talks with Peking as an important success in the American effort to warm up U.S. relations with China.

Administration sources said, however, they have no illusion the meeting, to be held Jan. 20 in Warsaw, will bring any dramatic or immediate results. The session will be the 135th between the two sides in recent years.

Ottawa Slow With Biafra Aid

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Privately, there are not many MPs who deny that the government, technically, legalistically and diplomatically, has handled the Biafran relief problem properly.

"We can't shoot our way into Nigeria to deliver food and medicine," a source close to Prime Minister Trudeau said.

But there is also private agreement that, politically, the government botched it.

The reason given is that the government did not fully grasp the impact on the Canadian public of the indescribable pictures of starving children on television.

IMPACT FAR-REACHING

One politician here said:

"Those pictures have probably had greater impact than any since the crematoriums were unlocked in Germany after the war.

"Many people cannot even bear to look at them.

"Canadians wanted something done for those children. They couldn't do anything themselves so they expected the government to do it for them.

"Whatever was done, they wanted it done fast.

"But we haven't done anything the Canadian public can see or feel."

The government had good reason to be wary of forcing gifts on the Nigerians in a civil war situation.

In 1968, the government sent armed forces Hercules transport planes to Nigeria to move relief supplies. But a civilian relief plane was shot down by Nigeria and Biafra would not accept daylight mercy flights. The Canadian military planes were recalled.

Mr. Trudeau sent his personal representative, Ivan Head, to Lagos three times to confer with Nigerian authorities on alternative methods of providing relief.

The last plan was to parachute food and medicine into Biafra from Hercules transports.

Again, the government had bad luck. One day after the government's announcement of a $1,000,000 gift to Canairelief, Biafra fell apart.

Nigeria resented the operations of Canairelief and similar organizations and was consequently annoyed—"disappointed," said External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp—at the Canadian government's action.

INFLUENCE WANES

One source said Canada apparently destroyed any influence it had in Lagos with the Canairelief grant.

Even without this misfortune, it might have been difficult, if not impossible, to get Nigeria to accept Hercules-transported aid for Biafrans.

But for Canadian domestic political purposes, if nothing else, the government should have dispatched some planes immediately with supplies, even if they had to land in a country adjoining Nigeria and wait, many MPs of all parties say.

This of course is partly political cynicism of a high order.

But, as one MP put it, "We are paid to look after the wishes of Canadians."

Ex-Telegrapher Dies

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — Frank B. Powers, 81, former president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, died Tuesday. An employee of both The Associated Press and United Press during the 1920s, Powers was for many years head of the CTU, now the United Telegraph Workers.

Arson Suspected

SUMAS (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday that arson is suspected in a fire that damaged a trestle on the B.C. Hydro rail line in Sumas district. A Hydro spokesman said gasoline was poured over the timbers then set on fire. The spokesman said damage was superficial.

FAMILY REUNION AIDED BY GOV'T

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Fidelis Ezemenari expects to be reunited soon with his three children and a sister who were caught in Biafra when civil war broke out in the summer of 1967.

His sister managed to get out of Biafra with the three small children in a plane just before Christmas. Since then they have been in Lisbon, waiting for immigration procedures to be settled.

A spokesman for the department of immigration said Wednesday that in view of special circumstances the four will be allowed to enter Canada without visas. They should be here in a few days, he said.

Dr. Ezemenari, a physicist with the meteorological branch of the Ontario department of highways, said his wife died last June. But he does not know how.

He said he came to Canada with his family in 1963 and gained a doctorate in physics at the University of Calgary two years later.

The family decided in 1965 to return to Nigeria, he said, and his wife and children went on ahead. When civil war seemed imminent he tried to get them back but his wife's passport had expired and they were unable to leave.

Since then he has received little news of his family. He learned last September that his wife had died in June.

Bill WALKER

Well, now that it's golf shoes and fishing rods again on Sundays, what about all this unbelievable nonsense that has been the American professional football scene?

Certainly the destruction of the Minnesota Vikings by the Kansas City Chiefs raised more than a few eyebrows while giving the American Football League the instant fame and respect it originally paid $19 million to get.

That's right.

That's the price the National Football League demanded, and got, for allowing the intrusion of the AFL to take place.

For this was the last season of the NFL and AFL as such. Next fall the AFL becomes the American section of the NFL.

And so you can buy a form of recognition, which the AFL was coerced into doing four years ago; you can attain the same respectability legitimately on the playing field, which the New York Jets and Kansas City Chiefs have done, or you can be just plain lucky. That's the fortunate position in which Cleveland, Baltimore and Pittsburgh find themselves.

It was in 1966 that the two leagues decided it would be cheaper to live as one, and end the player raiding and other expensive feuding that was taking place. Thus emerged the rating system which said the NFL was better, and the AFL should pay for the honor and the glory of competing in the major league, and against its more proficient teams.

And it seemed a justifiable proposition at that time, and expecially after the Green Bay Packers had whomped the stuffing out of the Kansas City Chiefs and Oakland, in the first two Super Bowl games.

Then came the original Super-Joe.

Joe Namath, fabled quarterback of the New York Jets, proclaimed for all to hear that the Jets would quickly disprove any ideas of superiority by the NFL by whipping the mighty Colts of Baltimore.

Most laughed. But not the Colts as the Jets won, 16-7.

And Namath and the AFL laughed last.

Still, this was written off as "anything can happen" day. The Jets had won. So what? Weren't the Minnesota Vikings the toughest terrors to ever come out of the north? Overconfidence would not be their enemy.

But they had another, and a meaner foe.

It was the Chiefs, who were too big a worry, in more ways than one. And the Vikings needn't feel discouraged. For it appeared that the Chiefs would have whipped any other NFL club just as badly.

And now on the eve of the merger of the two leagues, the NFL has lost its last two Super Bowl games. The AFL is all even for all time, for the playoff schedule changes next season as well.

And the suggestion that had to come and did, that the three top teams in the AFL, Kansas City, Oakland, and the Jets, may play better football than the top three in the NFL, need not be taken with the proverbial grain of salt. The taste in the NFL is bad enough now.

At any rate, next season everything will be changed. Each section of the NFL will have 13 teams. Three were forced to leave the original NFL to make the numerical match-up possible. As explained here previously, those three clubs are Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Baltimore. They agreed to switch, on their terms.

And they must have been smiling to themselves, even at the expense of ignoring their traditional loyalties, at their good fortune which coincided with the Super Bowl result.

For now in their new home, they can rightfully bask in the reflected glory of the Super Bowl champions, while cheerfully accepting $3 million each for suffering the pain of having the leave the hallowed halls of the NFL and its tougher? teams.

What a steal!

And as for that $19 million balm which was agreed upon four years ago as the going price of respectability, the AFL should demand a new appraisal.

Either that, or the NFL give it all back. With interest.

Fairbairn, Esposito Enhance Rookie Bids

By Canadian Press

Rookies Bill Fairbairn and Tony Esposito stole the spotlights in National Hockey League action Wednesday night with performances that make both top contenders for the Calder Trophy.

Right winger Fairbairn scored two goals to spark New York Rangers to a 7-1 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs while goalie Esposito registered his ninth shutout of the season with Chicago Black Hawks in a 5-0 win over Pittsburgh Penguins.

In two other games, Montreal Canadiens beat Los Angeles Kings 4-2 and Minnesota North Stars downed St. Louis Blues 5-2.

Fairbairn, 23-year-old native of Brandon, Man., now has 13 goals and 20 assists after 40 games with the East Division leaders.

He played only one game with the Rangers last season. He expected to be cut from the regular roster again after last fall's training camp, but an opening for him appeared early in the season when team captain Bob Nevin suffered a knee injury. Since then, Fairbairn has teamed with centre Walt Tkaczuk and left winger Dave Balon to form New York's highest-scoring line.

And his performance before a crowd of 16,445 at Toronto Wednesday could not help but gain him more votes for the Calder, which goes to the season's top rookie.

His first goal of the night at 1:32 of the first period started the Ranger attack which eventually drove goalie Bruce Gamble from the Toronto nets.

Dave Keon tied it up for the Leafs before the first period ended but after that the Rangers took charge with Fairbairn getting the go-ahead goal early in the middle period.

Leafs Use Rookie Netminder

The Rangers had only a 42-40 advantage in shots on goal but after Nevin's goal at 6:24 of the third period, Toronto coach John McLellan pulled Gamble in favor of Gerry McNamara, backup goalie from Orillia Terriers of the Ontario Senior Hockey League.

McNamara allowed the first two shots against him in for goals, before stopping six other drives. Leafs' other regular goalies, Johnny Bower and Marv Edwards, are both sidelined with knee injuries.

Esposito stopped 28 shots in the game at Chicago to move within four shutouts of the modern NHL record of 13 for a season set by Harry Lumley of Toronto Maple Leafs in 1953-54.

The 28-year-old goalie played in only 13 games with Montreal last season and stands out as a prominent contender for the Calder Trophy as well as the Vezina Trophy for leading goaltender.

Montreal moved one point ahead of Boston Bruins to take over second place, three points behind the leading Rangers in the East Division.

Jacques Lemaire, the league's leading goal-scorer, collected his 24th and 25th of the season to start the Canadiens' comeback from a two-goal deficit.

Bill Goldsworthy scored twice and assisted on another goal by Jean-Paul Parise to lead Minnesota over the West Division leaders.

Bucks and Cents Show Good Value

Cougars, Vernon Suffer Setbacks

The fastest-riding British Columbia Junior Hockey League teams both encounted stop signs Wednesday, now are turning towards an important collision Saturday night.

In Vernon, the upstart Kelowna Buckaroos applied the brakes on the home team's 11-game undefeated streak by upsetting the Essos 5-4.

The results enabled Vancouver to hop past Vernon into second place, four points behind Cougars. But both Vernon and Victoria, who meet in a crucial game at Memorial Arena on Saturday, have five games in hand on Vancouver.

FORSLUND SHARP

Victoria stayed in contention for the first 50 minutes of the game behind some steady defensive play and the outstanding goaltending of Ed Forslund.

Although outshot 21-14 in the first two periods and 40-22 overall, Forslund kept Centennials in check with some clutch stops before his protection folded in the final period.

Defenceman Laurie Moore connected for Victoria's lone tally midway through the second period and 12 seconds after leaving the penalty box.

GOAL DISALLOWED

Don Blyth momentarily appeared to have boosted the lead to 2-0 late in the second period when his shot hit the cross-member and dropped straight down. The goal light came on but referee Barry Ballance ruled the puck had not gone over the line.

Centennials came on strong from the start of the third period and forced the tired Cats into making the mistakes which allowed the tying and winning goals.

The tying goal came after a long shift when the Victoria team was unable to freeze the puck for a faceoff. Larry Simon came up with the puck and fired it out to the unchecked Alex Dick, who slipped it in.

LOST FACEOFF

A little over two minutes later, Rob Aquiline backhanded what proved to be the winning goal past Forslund after Cougars lost a faceoff in their own zone.

Reilly clinched the victory in the final 30 seconds while Victoria's Dale Pennock was in the penalty box.

In Vernon, the Buckaroos took advantage of Vernon penalties to chalk up the victory. Two of Kelowna's three third-period markers came on power plays. The clubs entered the final stanza tied 2-2.

Chuck Carignan scored the winner on a power play with less than three minutes remaining. It was his second goal of the night. Other Kelowna scorers were Ken Philips, Cliff McKay and Tim Negrello.

Montreal Ready To Cast Its Bid

MONTREAL (CP)—Far from being dismayed by the formidable competition, Mayor Jean Drapeau said Wednesday Montreal will make a big push to get the 1976 Olympic Games.

Between now and May 13, when the International Olympic Committee meets in Amsterdam, Montreal representatives will visit all IOC members to argue the city's case, Mr. Drapeau told a news conference.

He expressed confidence that Montreal will succeed in its second quest of the Summer Olympics.

"We lost by only one vote to Munich." The West German city was awarded the 1972 Olympics.

MAKE OLYMPIC BID

Montreal began its campaign for the 1976 Olympics in 1968, when it got the approval of the Canadian Olympic Association. Its application was formally presented to IOC president Avery Brundage by Mayor Drapeau earlier this month in Chicago.

Mr. Drapeau told the news conference that recent Canadian criticism of Mr. Brundage over the circumstances that caused Canada's withdrawal from the world hockey championship will have no effect upon Montreal's Olympic bid.

He said he is not prepared to comment on the possible effect that Vancouver's bid for the 1976 Winter Olympics might have. Germany in 1936 was the last country to play host to the Winter and Summer Olympics in the same year.

Principal items that Montreal had pledged to build for the Games are an 80,000-seat stadium and an Olympic Village for 12,000 athletes, officials and reporters that could later be converted into a residential district for 4,000 households.

Realignment Issue Remains Deadlocked

NEW YORK (AP) — The 13 clubs of the new National Conference of the National Football League could not reach agreement on realignment after a five-hour meeting Wednesday.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle said the meeting would resume today and that "a decision will be reached before the owners go home."

Rozelle said nine different realignment proposals have been suggested.

The conference's alignment was hammered out last summer after Baltimore Colts, Cleveland Browns and Pittsburgh Steelers of the old NFL agreed to join the 10 AFL teams in one half of the merged professional leagues.

Under the terms of their agreement, Cleveland will compete with Pittsburgh, Houston Oilers and Cincinnati Bengals in one four club division. Kansas City Chiefs, Oakland Raiders, S..n Diego Chargers and Denver Broncos will also play in a four-team division. Baltimore joins Buffalo Bills, Boston Patriots, Miami Dolphins and New York Jets in a five-club group.

PROBLEMS MANY

Attempts to realign the 10 NFL holdovers have run into all sorts of problems on the basis of geography, weather, stadium size, gate potential and current competitive ability. Clubs object to being placed in a division which figures to be dominated by a powerful club for years.

However, the failure of the Minnesota Vikings against the Kansas City Chiefs last Sunday in the Super Bowl championship and the defeat of Baltimore by New York Jets last year has altered the thinking of some owners.

A unanimous vote by club owners is necessary before any realignment can be made.

New Orleans Saints want to be in with Atlanta Falcons and Dallas Cowboys. Philadelphia Eagles, New York Giants and Washington Redskins want to be together. Los Angeles Rams and San Francisco '49ers must be in the same division. And so on. The problem is trying to find somebody who will give a little.

Bluenose Designer, William Roue Dies

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — William James Roue, the designer of the championship racing schooner Bluenose, died here Wednesday. He was 90.

A versatile naval architect and an ardent yachtsman, Roue designed many sailing craft. His most famous design, the Bluenose, won the North American fishing fleet championship from the United States in 1921.

City Yachtsman Holds 17th Spot

SYDNEY, Australia — John Malleson of Victoria is 17th overall after the fifth and sixth races of the world championship international Thunderbird sailing series currently being held in Sydney harbour.

Malleson placed 12th in both races and has accumulated 99 penalty points overall.

He was unable to complete the first race Wednesday when the mast of his yacht Aviva snapped in a hard north-westerly wind but had better luck today in another yacht named Zest.

Sydney yachtsman, Dr. Tony Parkes took a stranglehold on the series with a win and a second-placing.

Dr. Parkes now has sailed his yacht Moonraker II to four wins, a second and a fifth placing in the six races so far in the seven-race series.

Discarding his worst performance, 10 penalty points for his fifth placing in the third race, Dr. Parkes has only three penalty points.

Richard Wilson of Sydney, who won the sixth race today with Kaldari, is in second position on 17 points but has no hope of displacing Dr. Parkes.

Mets' Seaver Acclaimed Best

NEW YORK (AP)—Tom Seaver, whose vibrant pitching arm triggered the New York Mets' transformation from misfits to champions of the baseball world, was named Male Athlete of the Year Wednesday in The Associated Press' annual poll.

Joe Kapp, quarterback formerly with British Columbia Lions and Calgary Stampeders and now with the National Football League's Minnesota Vikings, came fifth in the balloting of sports writers and sports broadcasters across the United States.

Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins' young defenceman from Parry Sound, Ont., who now leads the National Hockey League in scoring, placed 11th.

Seaver, at 25-years-old the Mets' inspirational leader and the major leagues' biggest winner in 1969, is the fifth baseball player to capture the award in as many years.

He beat out another New York folk hero, quarterback Joe Namath of the American Football League's Jets with 96 votes to Namath's 51.

Steve Owens, Oklahoma's Heisman Trophy winning college football standout, edged Rod Laver, the Australian pro who scored a tennis grand slam by winning the year's four major tournaments, for third place. Owens received 41 votes to 40 for Laver and 35 for Kapp.

The poll was conducted before Kapp and the Vikings lost to Kansas City in last Sunday's Super Bowl, which will count in the 1970 balloting.

TOP FIVE

Following the top five in the balloting were:

Hank Aaron, Atlanta's brilliant veteran outfielder, with 14 votes, Bobby Orr with 13, football stars Calvin Hill of the NFL Dallas Cowboys and Archie Manning of the University of Mississippi football team with 11 each, and Brazilian soccer great Pele, with 10.

Canucks Retain Winning Manners

PHOENIX (AP) — Vancouver Canucks scored in the first and third periods here Wednesday to gain a 2-1 Western Hockey League victory over Phoenix Roadrunners.

It was the 18th win for league-leading Vancouver in its last 22 games.

Ted McCaskill split the Phoenix defence and raced in to score the winning goal at 6:55 of the final period, after Jim Paterson banged home a rebound to tie the score at 1-1 in the second period.

It was the only game scheduled Wednesday.

MOULDER OF CHAMPS, JOHNNY MURPHY DIES

NEW YORK (UPI) — Johnny Murphy, general manager of the New York Mets, died following a massive heart attack in a New York hospital Wednesday night.

Murphy, 61, moved in as general manager of the National League team two years ago when Bing Devine returned to St. Louis. Murphy celebrated his greatest year in baseball in 1969 when the upstart Mets, 100-1 longshots at the start of the season, won the pennant and the World Series.

He suffered what was termed a "coronary occlusion" on Dec. 30, the day of his 35th wedding anniversary, and had been in the intensive care unit of Roosevelt Hospital until his death.

The Mets were informed earlier Wednesday that Murphy had improved to the point where he would be moved to a private room as soon as one became available.

University Tourney Hockey's Alternative

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiations to stage an invitational university hockey tournament in Winnipeg as a replacement for the scrapped world tournament have been launched here, it was learned Wednesday.

Sources said if financing can be arranged—presumably from the federal government—some firm word on the proposed tournament could be expected by Friday.

The aim would be to have university teams from Canada and the United States, plus the Canadian and U.S. national teams if possible, in the competition.

Winnipeg was to play host to the world hockey tournament this year. But a clash between Canada and world amateur hockey authorities about the eligibility of players resulted in Canadian withdrawal from the world competition.

One source in Ottawa said such a Canada-U.S. collegiate hockey competition has been kicked around for about five years. Since the collapse of the world competition slated for Winnipeg, interested parties had decided concrete progress could be made by "taking advantage of a void."

Disillusioned Huck Leaving Nationals

"I just can't see any incentive for continuing hockey on an exhibition basis against senior teams," the 24-year-old centre said Wednesday.

Huck was one of several veteran national team members whose hockey futures were uncertain after Canada's sudden withdrawal from the 1970 world hockey tournament two weeks ago.

MONTREAL PROPERTY

Huck is the property of Montreal Canadiens, having signed with a Montreal affiliate in his junior years, but he consistently turned down professional offers, playing instead with the nationals and completing his education.

He indicated at the beginning of this season it was to be his last as a national, the tournament in Montreal and Winnipeg the culmination of his five years with the team.

But when Canada withdrew from world hockey over a dispute involving the use of professional players in an international tournament, the national team's future became uncertain.

SCHOOLING FIRST

Huck said he intends to play hockey professionally next season, but he said "schooling comes first for the remainder of the (1969-70) season." He is in his final year of law at University of Manitoba.

The five-foot-seven centre said he would consider a professional offer the remainder of the season but only with an arrangement for completing his degree.

KAPP TOPS PROS' POLL

NEW YORK (AP)—Quarterback Joe Kapp, who led the Minnesota Vikings to the National Football League championship, has been named as the December winner in the S. Rae Hickok Pro Athlete of the Year poll.

Kapp received 51 first place votes and 189 points. Golfer Arnold Palmer, who made a strong comeback, was second with 15 firsts and 82 points. Daryle Lamonica, quarterback of the Oakland Raiders, was third with 8 and 49.

Dutch Squad Ties England

LONDON (CP) — Holland, which failed to qualify for this year's World Cup soccer finals in Mexico, held England to a scoreless draw Wednesday night before a crowd of 80,000 in Wembley Stadium.

Dutch goalkeeper Jan van Beveren had the measure of any British attack. Gordon Banks in the English goal thwarted the Dutch offensive.

HOPING FOR LUCK

England appeared to rely on centring the ball and hoping for luck. Bobby Charlton, the England captain in place of Bobby Moore who was dropped for the game, floated in several corners in vain.

In European Fairs Cup competition at Southampton, Newcastle United, defending cup champion, qualified for the quarter-finals this season when they drew, 1-1, with Southampton in the second leg of their third-round tie Wednesday night.

The first game was also drawn, 0-0, making the aggregate score for the tie 1-1, but Newcastle qualified because away goals count double in the case of a draw on aggregate.

Anderlecht of Belgium also qualified for the quarter-finals Wednesday night, although they were beaten, 3-2, by Dunfermline in their second-leg, third-round match. The game was played at Dunfermline.

At Barcelona, Spain, Internazionale Milan beat Barcelona, 2-1, in their first-leg, third-round match Wednesday night, and Karl Zeiss Jena of East Germany defeated Dozsa Ujpest of Hungary, 1-0.

ANN HANNAH, UVic STUDENT, SAYS

"I COULD HARDLY BELIEVE THE RESULTS"

ANN HANNAH, U-Vic Student majoring in English, says:

"I could hardly believe the results!"

"I was frankly skeptical when I heard of the Evelyn Wood method of Dynamic Reading. It just didn't seem feasible to read as fast as the ads claimed and still retain any of the information in the reading material. I know now that it is not only feasible, but comprehension is actually increased in most cases . . . it was in mine.

"I still find it hard to believe that I can now read and absorb so much material in so little time!"

OF COURSE IT'S NATURAL TO BE SKEPTICAL! But it's true . . . you can increase your reading speed, with full comprehension, to levels that will amaze you!

Family Life Centre Says 'Get Involved'

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Concern of Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen over problems that now beset every-day living, is rapidly turning from a sidelines position of watchful silence into a strong effort to become involved in the action.

Forbes

This was evident a little over two months ago when, through efforts of a group of concerned men and women, a family life education centre was opened here.

It is even clearer now with completion of the first 12 week course sponsored by that centre. In it 30 men and women (all volunteers) took part in a round of group-leader training sessions to prepare them to go out and where requested, help in creating better relationships between people, in families and in communities.

Dr. John Wood, director of Saanich mental health, acted as consultant throughout the sessions. Roy and Mona Hundleby, many years happily married and with grown children and several grandchildren, co-ordinated the course and led most of the discussions.

In talking to the Hundlebys about family life education (or if you prefer it, education for living) I discovered that the aim is to strengthen family and individual relationships through a preventive rather than a curative program.

Leadership therefore doesn't mean offering solutions to problems. Rather it is in assisting individuals, parents and young people to develop, through group discussions, insights into themselves as individuals and as members of a family.

It is also geared to help them understand the needs and feelings of others; to increase confidence in themselves as people and as parents and to satisfy family and community relationships.

"That's why emphasis is placed on techniques of group discussion, with a wide understanding of family, child development and relationships between individuals," the Hundlebys explained.

The 30 volunteers who completed the course are now ready to help any interested group to plan discussions around various problems of family life.

"It is our firm belief that people need to be able to express their thinking in an accepting atmosphere, without fear of either being judged or preached at," Roy says.

"They need to feel accepted in a group, even though their ideas may differ."

That's why discussions are planned so those taking part will "think out their own attitudes and ideas, and sometimes re-assess them; talk out their problems and often see them in a new light and learn from the experiences and points of views of others but find their own solutions in terms of their own backgrounds and beliefs."

★ ★ ★

Mona Hundleby reminded me that today, most people have worries of some sort or other. They may not be sufficiently serious to need personal counselling but they are serious enough to cause concern.

"They are best helped by giving them an opportunity to find their own solutions through sharing in a group common every-day experiences with a minimum of participatory help from a trained discussion leader."

If you'd like to get your neighbors together to form a family life education discussion group; if you belong to a club or organization in search of a stimulating program that conceivably could help you and your members, then get in touch with the Hundlebys (telephone 592-1566) or with Dr. Wood at the Legislative Buildings and you'll have a discussion leader in a matter of minutes.

★ ★ ★

Right now Roy and Mona are completing plans for a parents' workshop in March and they are organizing a program for married couples titled More Joy in Your Marriage, after Easter.

Again, if you are interested — get involved.

As it was pointed out at the beginning of this column, the time for standing on the sidelines is over. Action is needed today if we're ever to return to a sane and sensible way of living.

Environmental Control: A Public Right

Forests Minister Ray Williston advised the forest industry Wednesday to adapt to changing public attitudes toward resource development.

Industry must recognize the "best use" of resources is beginning to be judged in other terms than those of the economic return, he told the 27th annual Truck Loggers' Association Convention in Vancouver.

"This new judgment is coming largely from the general public which has a new awareness of British Columbia's natural environment and a growing concern about its future," Williston said.

A number of new groups have dedicated themselves to environmental control, and he added that there was no doubt in his mind that the public had a right to this concern.

However it was regrettable that "some of these public organizations are ignorant of the extent to which environmental control already is being practised in British Columbia."

Both government and industry must share at least a part of the blame for "insufficient communication with the public."

The minister said the public does not realize what the size of the bill for environmental control might be.

The general public can not be expected to bear the full brunt of control measures. "This would be unreasonable . . . and the time has come for industry to fully recognize its responsiblities in the matter and be prepared to accept a proportional share of the cost."

The minister said industry cannot expect to seek relief through "easements or concessions" from government for this would be tantamount to passing the cost on to the taxpayer.

"Instead," Williston added, "industry at large must prepare itself to take on its share of the bill within its own operating cost structures."

The forest industry, because of its heavy reliance on exports, might be affected more than other industries because the choice might be between a reduction in profits or an increase in the cost of the product.

Such an increase in price might hamper foreign marketing. But, he added, that one could not overlook the fact that changing public concepts toward the environment are not exclusive to Canada, which means that "foreign competitors are most likely to be saddled with the same financial considerations for environmental control."

The minister said that for the industry to continue to receive a reasonable economic return, the challenge boils down to two essentials.

These would be the ability of the industry to accomplish successful environmental control, such as pollution control, at reasonable cost, and the ability to reduce other operating costs by improved management practices.

Williston challenged the forest industry to be one of the leaders in meeting the challenge of adapting integrated land-use and environmental control to social pressures.

Driver Jailed Three Months On Third Impairment Charge

A man who struck a 13-year-old boy in his home Christmas Day causing a severe cut to the boy's eyebrow was given a suspended sentence and placed on a year's probation Wednesday by Judge William Ostler.

Robert J. Thompson, 123 Bushby, pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault causing bodily harm when he appeared in court Dec. 27.

The accused said he did not know why he had hit the boy and that he had been drinking that day.

★ ★ ★

Dennis G. Laverty, 18, no fixed address, received a suspended sentence and was placed on a one year probation for breaking and entering and theft.

Laverty with a companion broke into John's Grocery Store, 1871 Oak Bay and stole $15 in coins from the cash register, 11 cartons of cigarettes and 18 cans of food.

Robert Bourgeois, 20, no fixed address, was sentenced to six months definite and six months indeterminate in Oakalla prison farm for the same offence when he apheared before Ostler Jan. 6.

Harold E. White, 29, of 547 Mount View, was fined $350 for impaired driving and $75 for refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

His driver's licence was also suspended.

Police officers told the court they had found the accused's car in a six-foot ditch at Wilkinson and Trans-Canada Highway Dec. 23 about 1:30 a.m.

The accused was sitting in another vehicle at the scene when the officers arrived but admitted he had been the driver of the car in the ditch.

He was taken to the Saanich police station where he was asked five times to take the compulsory breathalyzer test. He refused.

Ralph E. Johnson, 60, of 2535 Selwyn, was sentenced to three months in prison for impaired driving and 14 days, to be served concurrently, for refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

Johnson was observed driving on the Trans-Canada Highway near Brock Dec. 16 at 20-m.p.h. in a 50-m.p.h. zone about 12:30 a.m.

He had two previous drinking-driving convictions and Ostler in passing sentence recommended he be sent to an institution that could supply alcoholic treatment.

James H. Coffey, 45, of 2766 Asquith, was fined $300 for impaired driving and it was recommended that his licence be suspended for four months.

He was observed to veer from side to side in his lane while driving on Topaz Nov. 25 about 12:25 a.m.

Richard A. Patterson, 496 Strange, was fined $150 for driving a vehicle while his blood-alcohol content was over .08 per cent and $150 for dangerous driving.

It was recommended his licence be suspended for three months.

Patterson passed a car on the shoulder of the roadway while driving on the Trans-Canada Highway Dec. 19 and in doing so knocked down a pedestrian walking on the shoulder.

The pedestrian was not hurt but Patterson soon afterward lost control of his car and drove into a ditch.

Chief Killed

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The head of Guatemala's intelligence service died in a burst of machine-gun fire Tuesday as he drove his car through this capital city, police said. A police officer was injured in the attack. Officers said a group of terrorists in a car pulled up alongside the one being driven by the intelligence chief, Justo Lopez Castanza, and opened fire. He died en route to hospital. No arrests were reported.

CARELESSNESS PAYS FOR THESE 'PATCHERS'

A pair of neophyte Victoria businessmen in their 20's hope to patch their way to $30,000 a year out of other people's carelessness.

Using a recently-developed process, partners Garven Kinley, 27, and Alexander Black, 28, have set their sights on repairing vinyl upholstery, particularly the scarred and cigarette-burned chairs and couches of restaurants, hotels and public rooms.

Vinyl welding, as they call it, was refined through the efforts of Grant Cook, of Vancouver, who had a chemist develop a new pigmented compound that can be blended to match colors of any vinyl upholstery.

But the important breakthrough in the Canadian Vinyl Welding process lies in the finished characteristics of the patch, Kinley said.

On the spot heat curing of successive applications results in a kind of vulcanized bond that preserves the flexibility and resilience of the patch.

And for the owners of cafes and beer parlors it can mean savings of hundreds of dollars in upholstery repairs normally sent out for re-covering.

Kinley, a competent amateur painter, studied architecture at the University of Oregon. His partner was a draftsman for a Vancouver patent attorney before they teamed up here.

Gov't Grows Safely

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said today the provincial government is being "very careful" in allowing any increases in the size of its establishment.

He said the B.C. government hasn't followed the lead of the federal government in actually reducing numbers of civil servants but he warned that the existing staff can expect to spread their efforts over a wider work area.

"We must understand thoroughly the consequences of unreasonable wage demands" associated with inflationary pressures, Loffmark said in expanding on remarks made Wednesday when he said no to a request for increased health inspection staff from the Greater Victoria area.

Loffmark said Wednesday that decreases in services will follow from wage or staff demands in excess of productivity or of the community's ability to pay for the increases.

He made clear today in an interview that he was not suggesting cuts in the current level of services but only in relation to future needs. The same number of people may be required to handle growth service functions, he said.

Miles for Millions Organizers Divide Up $70,000 Aid Bankroll

Miles for Millions organizers today signed a cheque for $70,000 to begin distribution of funds raised last Nov. 15.

March chairman Lynne Brassington and treasurer Bruce McKean said while the fund is still $60,000 below the original $130,000 target, they don't want to hold back available funds until all the money is in.

They also said commitments to international agencies have become more urgent since the end of fighting in Biafra.

G. R. Pearkes Clinic	24%	$16,800
Queen Alexandra Solarium	10%	$ 7,000
Family and Children's Service	8%	$ 5,600
Detached worker program	8%	$ 5,600
National Walk Committee	16.67%	$11,669
Care of Canada	11.11%	$ 7,777
Oxfam of Canada	11.11%	$ 7,777
Canairelief	11.11%	$ 7,777

Friday, the Victoria committee will attempt to track down money that hasn't been turned in by comparing sponsor sheets with deposit slips from banks.

Chargex Abuse High In City Says Chief

He was commenting on one of the topics discussed by police chiefs of 12 B.C. municipalities, meeting in Victoria Wednesday to draft briefs for Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

"Pretty well every day we have some kind of fraud involving Chargex reported to us," said Gregory.

Most common complaints involve misrepresentation and theft.

The increasingly large number of credit cards in circulation is compounding the problem, he said.

The chiefs made it clear that the provincial government's ban on most juvenile prosecutions is still a major source of discontent with them.

"One subject that has caused much concern to all those attending is the Attorney-General's two-year-old policy of not charging juveniles with infractions of city bylaws and provincial statutes such as the Motor Vehicle Act and the Liquor Act, unless special permission has been granted from the Attorney-General in each instance," said Gregory.

Experiment a Failure

"The chiefs felt that after a two-year trial period, the experiment was not only a failure but has had an adverse effect on our young people."

To protect young people from acquiring a federal criminal record the province has severely restricted prosecutions and police have argued this has produced a nose-thumbing attitude among young offenders.

Another topic discussed Wednesday was jurisdiction of police officers. Gregory explained that officers now have authority as policemen only within the county or municipality employing them. The chiefs want this extended to the province.

"In this day of rock and roll gatherings and campus unrest something might flare up where one force needs to ask for help from a neighboring one."

Another recommendation the chiefs will make is that the basis for reportable accidents be changed from those where damage is $100 or more to a minimum of $250.

All accidents with injuries would remain reportable.

Also discussed was the licensing of lotteries under recent ammendments to the criminal Code, the effect of the driver demerit system and of Criminal Code changes affecting restriction and prohibition of firearms.

Inquest Tonight On Mystery Death In Saanich Pond

An inquest opens tonight into the mystery death of Saanich high school student Douglas Hampton.

But coroner Edmond St. Jorre said today it will adjourn after hearing an identifying witness and from the doctor who pronounced death.

The inquest will continue in about 10 days, when Saanich police have had time to conclude their investigation and medical analysis completed by the Vancouver police laboratory, said the coroner.

Hampton, 18, disappeared on his way home from a Cordova Bay party Saturday night. His body was found at the edge of a weed-choked pond near Cordova Bay Road and Royal Oak Avenue Tuesday morning.

Preliminary indications were that he drowned but there has been a flurry of rumours that drugs were present at the Saturday night party.

Tonight's inquest sitting will allow St. Jorre to release the body for burial. The family plans a private service.

Government Eyeing Military For Marine Sections Control

By PAT DUFOUR

Depending on the results of a current survey, all marine sections of federal departments may be placed under the control of the Canadian armed forces Charles Lafontaine, 41, of Ottawa said today.

Deputy chief of personnel (civilian), department of national defence, Lafontaine is in Victoria as part of a B.C. tour of establishments.

"They are evaluating the value of a one-navy conception in which the department of transport vessels, department of fisheries ships and other marine facilities would all come under one head."

Lafontaine added that if the unification step was taken the various departments would have a consolidated and stronger voice.

LAFONTAINE

"It would probably be much more effective and priorities of the various requirements would be better determined."

He also predicted that if the consolidation takes place it could mean an addition of 5,000 civilian personnel to the work force of the Esquimalt base.

Lafontaine said that the marine section of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police might be the one exception.

SPECIAL SECURITY

The survey is being carried out by a three-man committee appointed by the Cabinet last fall. Heading the committee is Louis Audet, chairman of the Maritime Commission.

The other two members are Capt. Eric Brand, former director of operations for the department of transport, and Robert Martin, assistant secretary of the Treasury Board.

NOT IN FAVOR

DOT district manager Larry Slaght said today that he would not be in favor of a complete amalgamation of civilian and armed forces fleets.

He said that a more centralized system could result in better economy "but I would prefer to see an armed forces wing and a civilian one."

Slaght added, "There are some advantages to be gained, particularly by smaller departments like the department of fisheries and the hydrographic people.

BETTER OPPORTUNITIES

"It would provide better opportunities for career development and there would be economies in the field of refits and other cross-servicing."

In Vancouver, W. R. Hourston, director of the Pacific region for the department of fisheries had reservations.

"It all depends on what package deal they come up with. A task force was out here and we had some dialogue with them. I hope we'll have a chance to speak to their final recommendations."

Hourston added that each department had its variety of functions for its fleet. "During the fishing season our ships are out seven days a week. I wouldn't want to see their flexibility affected."

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me where I can send our used Christmas cards so that they can be of some use? R.H.

A. The Salvation Army in Indonesia uses cards in their mission work. These should be kept intact, not cut, and parcelled with a hole cut in the outer wrapping for postal inspection purposes. A notation on the outside should read Used Christmas Cards Only. The parcel should be addressed to Lt.-Col. Gladys Callis, Bala Keselamatan (Indonesian for Salvation Army), Djalan Djawa 16, Bandung, Djawa, Indonesia.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Project Sparks 'New Courage'

What are likely to be the basic needs of young people and adults in the world of the future?

What are likely to be the most urgent problems facing society in the future?

What should be the major purposes of education to meet these needs and problems?

What priority should be assigned to these purposes?

About 100 people — parents, students, teachers and school trustees — launched their own probe of these questions Wednesday night in Project Learning.

In six representative groups, they will meet regularly over the next few months in a broad debate which hopefully, will tap all corners of the community.

A decade ago the public was in general agreement on what schools were for, says Dr. John Wiens, director of education for the Greater Victoria school board and the man behind Project Learning.

Not so today. Now there are increasingly divergent opinions — the liberals opposing the authoritarians, the university-oriented at odds with "daily life" oriented.

★ ★ ★

"But I think there's something going on in our community at this time which makes me hopeful.

"All the suspicions we have — we've got to get them together so they can see t'ain't so."

Does he really think his diverse committees can come up with the answers to the big questions on education?

"They may not come up with new ideas. But they may give us new momentum, new courage."

And in the process committee-members at least will have a shot at one of the project purposes stated at their meeting in the Ewing Building Wednesday night.

That is to develop more effective communication among students, teachers, administrators, trustees and the general public.

Dr. Wiens says one of the factors which has made this sort of project rare in British Columbia has been the attitude of the department of education.

It apparently views such efforts as likely to "rock the boat." So government support has been lacking.

IT'S CURTAINS FOR CHAMBER'S BEDROOM LOOK

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant looked into the legislative chamber Wednesday, saw the off-white acoustic curtains covering the pink marble walls and promptly ordered them removed.

"Why, it looked like a bedroom in there" he said in ordering out the curtains installed by sound technicians.

The curtains were installed as part of an effort to improve the sound system in the chamber. A new speaker box is being suspended from the dome of the ceiling.

IT WAS, PERHAPS, A naughty act as cautious diplomacy looks on such matters. But this column salutes balding, bearded Norman Wright, who went down into Egypt and set a couple of our people free.

For Uvic Student Council President Wright, and for any unnamed shadows who may have assisted him in it, the cutting-out expedition was a gutsy and a risky one.

It might have landed venturesome Wright in the hands of the FBI, and conceivably in an American pokey.

Incidentally, the detached and even pious attitude ascribed to Canada's consulate in San Francisco toward a young Canadian impressed for U.S. military service surprises me.

★

What's the point of having diplomatic representation down there if it proves to be non-functional in one of its chief duties?

This is to assist Canadians who encounter difficulties. Olah alleges our consulate declined to concern itself in his case.

The American lawyer who was to handle the young man's defence appears to have been braver. As an individual, and in plain terms, he held an over-presumptuous draft board to be at fault for the attempted snatch.

★

In terms of population if not geographical extent, we are a little country in the lee of a mighty one. There's good in that fact, but there is also much that's bad. Industrially, we are both the beneficiaries and the victims of American conquest. For better or worse, it is not Britain or France, but the United States that sets our pace.

If you agree with me that being a carbon copy can be irksome, you may also share my unabashed satisfaction over the Wright raid.

It was impudent, it was dashing, it was successful. I suspect that pleased Victorians who relished a real-life adventure tale will take a cool view of any attempt to undo the deed.

I trust too that a deprived U.S. — which resented the grabbing of its own nationals enough to trigger the war of 1812 — will be a graceful loser!

IF YOU ARE EXPECTING a parcel sent by surface mail from overseas, have patience. Canadian Customs at Victoria is still working all-out to process what could wind up as the heaviest sending from the United Kingdom in its postal parcel section history.

★

The spate began with a very heavy pre-Christmas mail, and still continues. Staffers and extra hands have worked their way through sacks by the hundred. They aren't swamped, they staunchly declare, and the expect soon to have worked off the backlog.

Why the deluge? Nobody knows, but it's possible that better times in Britain may account for it at least in part.

★

Incidentally, surface mail from the UK arrives in Victoria in once-a-week lots. That's a pretty sound argument for air post, which drastically reduces the time from sender to recipient.

THERE ARE SOME ON whom the high cost of living lays a grievous burden. Here's a snatch from one of the letters I've received since the pending hike in power and bus rates was announced.

"I lost my husband over 12 years ago," this reader writes, "and my electricity rates are even more than they were when he was here. Then, I was cooking three meals a day, and washing once or twice a week, with a good deal of washing by hand in between. Now, when I do so much less, and seldom have more than one light on at a time, the charges are higher.

"By the time a person on a very limited budget pays for electricity, water, heating and telephone which is a necessity when you get older, live alone, and have to call the doctor in emergency, there isn't much left for anything else."

No comment, and none needed. Such letters speak for themselves.

That's it, except to convey a message from Stuart Fisher of 2254 Arbutus Road to the person unknown who found a plastic sack of school notebooks on rainy Tuesday night, and set it atop a mailbox at the Oak Bay-Foul Bay intersection.

Stuart, back-tracking next morning, found his books there.

"Without them, I'd be a dead duck," says he. "Many thanks!"

SHOPPING GUIDE

Joel to Glitter Just Like Vera

By PENNY SAVER

Yesterday this column told of the lovely square dance outfit Gladys' neighbor Joel bought his wife Vera to celebrate the success of her diet.

As I ran out of space, Vera had just begun to tell Gladys and me of the gift she had decided to buy Joel, since he, too, had dieted successfully.

After carefully hanging her new outfit in the cupboard, Vera returned to her parcels and selected three.

"Now that I'm slim and trim and have a beautiful dress to wear dancing, I'll have to be careful not to outshine my partner. So I decided Joel should get a snappy set of dancing clothes too.

"My first instinct was to go for the best in the shop, but the best, beyond a doubt, were the matching sets of light wool slacks and western style shirt.

"The slacks are $27.95, a pair, very slack-like with western styling but otherwise quite plain. The shirts again have western styling with opalescent brown button studs, and so forth but made of the same material as the slacks. They are undoubtably excellent, but how drab!

"So I just bought the slacks. . . ." At this she brought them out to show us. A nice gold color, these slacks betray their western styling around the pocket openings and in other small details, rather than from any extremes of style.

"Clearly the brightest thing a man could wear would be his shirt," she went on. "So this is what I looked for next."

Vera found some good serviceable western-style shirts made of a drip-dry, durable press fabric in brightly colored check patterns on special for $6.99, "as long as the stock lasts."

But she was looking for something more fancy.

Next she considered embroidered shirts.

One kind had bands of embroidery down the front in a braided pattern done with red, yellow and blue, flanked by yellow arrows with black tips. These come in white, blue and mint green.

But at last she decided on white shirts with black and silver embroidery in a horse motif. "After all if I glitter, he should glitter too."

There were also yellow shirts with brown and gold embroidery in a horse-shoe pattern.

These embroidered shirts are all drip-dry, durable press and cost $13.98.

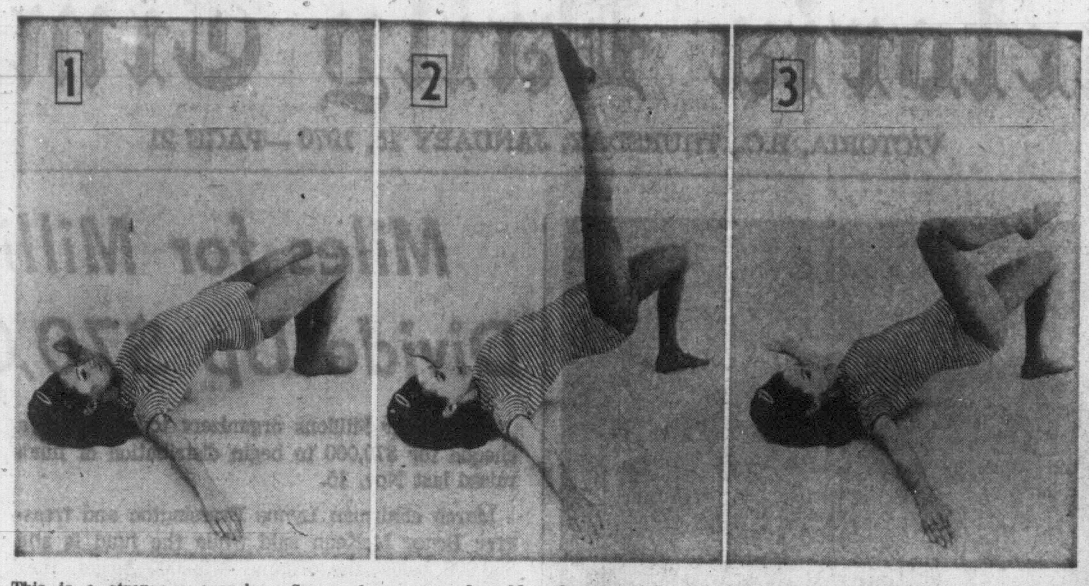
Joel needed a real western style hat, and Vera found these in good quality felt for $12.85, $13.85 and $15.85.

"The lowest price one had a smaller brim for men who aren't big enough to wear a wide brim with style. The other two vary in quality of materials. Joel is quite tall, so I bought the best," she told us.

"Of course, the band right now is just a strip of bias ribbon, but I'm going to hunt up a piece of silver and black braid to replace it.

"As for boots, he'll have to shop for those himself."

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.



This is a strenuous exercise. Some of you may be able to do only the first part. Lie on the floor on your back with your knees bent and your heels fairly close to your hips. Arms rest on the floor extending straight out from your shoulders. Lift your hips from the floor until your body is in a straight line from shoulders to knees. Your feet and shoulders support your weight (1). Now raise your left leg upward (2). Bend knee and return to place (3). Do the same with your left leg. Return to starting position. If you cannot do the leg raising just do the first part.

Dieter's Complexion Needs Special Care

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Santa was good to me
He should not have be
So I am going to do
Something good for he.

Corny but fun — and true! I confess I have eight pounds to lose and I am not going to have them lying around me and about me any longer. I feel younger than those extra pounds make me look. So, I am taking some of my own medicine and joining thousands of you in my Beauty Improvement Plan.

By all means give special attention to your skin during this self-improvement program. We should always take care of our complexion, but there are three periods in a woman's life when it is crucial. First is at teen-age when the oil glands are so active and blackheads and acne are threats. The second is from middle age on when the natural oils decrease and lubrication is essential if you wish to delay the signs of aging. The third is when losing weight.

It is so important to keep the epidermis soft and pliable when it is shrinking to new proportions. Body lotions should be used generously. The face and neck should be treated to lubricating creams and moisturizers every day. Since the goal of this course is to improve your appearance as much as possible during the next eight weeks, remember your complexion.

Cleanliness is of course a necessity if your are to have a lovely one. If your skin is dry use cleansing creams as a habit and soap and water occasionally. If it is oily, wash your face and neck with soap and water several times a day. Follow this with an astringent. Use no creams. One universal rule — always remove makeup at night.

Most women profit by the use of lubricating creams from the age of 30 on. If a woman has a very dry skin or lives in an extremely dry climate, she should use creams years sooner. She should also pat an eye cream about her eyes before going to sleep at night.

The exercises and the dieting you are doing for the sake of your figure and health will greatly improve your complexion. But if you have been giving your epidermis only hit and miss care why not make it a part of this eight weeks self-improvement? It will respond just as beautifully as your figure will.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"I've tried everything to break into these crackers--stupid of me not to realize that the dotted red line is where I'm supposed to insert the dynamite."

DEAR ABBY . . .

Tarnished Dream

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have recently become engaged and am in the process of planning my wedding. A problem has arisen about which my mother and I disagree. Let me explain the background:

When I was 16 I got into trouble. The boy ran out on me, but I kept the baby, and with the help of my wonderful family I raised the child. (She is now nearly 5.)

Abby, I want to have the kind of wedding every girl dreams about. My fiance says that he is with me all the way. I want a wedding gown and veil, and bridesmaids and organ music, and I even want my daughter to be my flower girl. It's not like nobody knows about what happened to me, Abby. All my friends and relatives know, and so do his. My mother said it isn't "right." Please help me make up my mind. I know that a wedding gown and veil is supposed to be for a first wedding only, but even though I am a mother, this IS my first wedding. Would it be so wrong? —Withhold My Name

DEAR WITHHOLD: If you want to have your dream wedding and your fiance is with you all the way, then I vote with you.

However, instead of a stark white gown and veil, I suggest off-white, ivory, or a pale pastel. And please don't think me unkind, but having your daughter for your flower girl would undoubtedly call attention to that part of your life which I think is better deemphasized on your wedding day. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this question is too dumb to answer.

Why are famous women always referred to as "Miss" — regardless of whether they are married or single?

For instance, you are called, "Miss Abigail Van Buren." I know that's not your real name, but since you are married and have grown children, why aren't you called "Mrs. Van Buren?"

Also, when Judy Garland died, they were calling her "Miss Garland" until the end, and she had been married several times and had children, too. So why wasn't she called "Mrs. Garland?" Don't Get It

DEAR DON'T: Yours is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. When a woman takes a pseudonym (pen name) for professional reasons, she is always known as "Miss" regardless of her marital status. (This would have been a good question for Miss Amy Vanderbilt, who is also a "Mrs.")

CONFIDENTIAL TO VIRGO: It is time to take stock of your company. Those who sleep with dogs, wake up with fleas. (Or worse!)

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

GOING STRONG IN KNITATHON

Mrs. Vvonne St. Cyr, left, claimed a world record this week after knitting continuously for 80 hours and 40 minutes. The Montreal grandmother was competing against Mrs. Jeanne Brunet, centre, who put down her needles after 65 hours, and Mrs. Gracia Gerard, who gave up after 53 hours. Four other women joined the contest later and may yet outkit Mrs. St. Cyr. (CP Wirephoto.)

Canadians Plan Maple Leaf Ball

NEW YORK (CP) — Dr. Mary Lee Edward, a surgeon who spent her girlhood in Petrolia, Ont., began 50 years ago to gather her Canadian friends in New York into a club.

The organization, now the Canadian Women's Club of New York City Inc., celebrates its golden anniversary Friday, Jan. 23, with a Maple Leaf dinner-dance at the Plaza Hotel. Dr. Edward still is an active member.

The aims of the Canadian Women's Club remain as they were 50 years ago: to encourage and promote amicable relations between the people of Canada and the United States, to forward the best interests of Canadian women in the U.S., and to establish a scholarship fund.

Honorary patrons at this month's dinner-dance are Prime Minister Trudeau; Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. A. Edgar Ritchie, Washington; Consul-General and Mrs. R. Guy C. Smith, New York City, and Ambassador and Mrs. Yvon Beaulne, the United Nations.

Mrs. Robert G. Hogg is president of the club, which has 135 members. Mrs. Peter Armstrong and Mrs. Frederick Amendolara are co-chairmen of the dinner-dance committee.

Former Child Wonder Francoise Sagan 'Increasingly Critical' of Her Own Work

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

PARIS (AP) — One of France's foremost woman writers is against what she calls the "sexuality explosion" in Western culture.

"To me," says Francoise Sagan, "making love can never be a commodity, like margarine."

The former child wonder of French literature makes a sharp distinction between the modern trend toward "sexual exhibitionism" and the impassioned but cynical love which is the main theme of her novels.

"I have never written an erotic book and I never will," she said in an interview. "I believe people should enjoy making love a lot but not talk about it.

"Obviously, the old taboos had to be swept away, but why this sudden frenzy of talking about it as though making love were a brand new invention? I prefer to express everything in a single elegant phrase which allows the reader to conjure up his own sexual image."

Miss Sagan, now 34, achieved fame almost overnight at 18 with her first novel Bonjour Tristesse, a cynical tale of seduction and infidelity among the idle rich. This remained the main theme of eight novels and three plays. In 16 years, she has sold more than 10,000,000 books in more than 20 languages. Her output is slowing down and she is increasingly critical of her own work.

IS NOT SATISFIED

"I would really like to write two or three really good novels," she said. "Something more profound and more thorough than what I have written up to now."

Critics say she writes only about people with plenty of money to spend, but she refuses to move down the social scale, saying: "It would be bad form for me to describe people I don't know and don't understand."

There is a paradox between her family background and the emotional instability described in her books and apparent in her own married life. She attributes her gift as a writer largely to her upbringing in a happy, stable family, but she is twice-divorced and professes to have no faith in marriage.

DIVORCED TWICE

She married publisher Guy Schoeller, 20 years her senior, in the wake of Bonjour Tristesse. They were divorced in 1960 and two years later she married Robert Westhoff, an American sculptor who became the father of her son Denis. She divorced Westhoff only a few months later, then became reconciled with him and lived with him for several years. Early last year they separated again and she now lives with seven-year-old Denis in a rented villa in the fashionable Auteuil district. Westhoff comes by every Thursday and takes his son to the movies.

While her house is comfortably furnished she professes not to care about such things as furniture. She still loves fast sports cars, but after two accidents has almost given up driving.

"There are too many cars on the road, and too many madmen driving them," she says.

IS INFORMAL

She has doubts about her own future as a writer. She was so displeased with a play she worked on for months that she scrapped it. Her French publisher, Flammarion, pays her a retainer of $5,000 a month without setting any deadline on her next book.

Delta Backed On Tax Fight

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell has thrown his full weight into the battle for provincial jurisdiction over offshore territory.

He said at a press conference Wednesday that extension of the boundaries of Delta municipality last month has given Delta the clear right to tax National Harbors Board lands leased out to Kaiser Resources Ltd. at the Roberts Bank superport development.

Campbell said the cabinet order-in-council extending the boundary was passed in mid-December as a result of a report by a boundary commission which recommended that the port facilities be entirely within Delta to avoid taxation and other administrative complexities.

●

The National Harbors Board is creating new land by dumping fill to extend Roberts Bank for the multi-million dollar port facility. The new boundary ensures all newly created land falls within the municipality, Campbell said.

Delta and the NHB have been engaging in a dispute over whether the municipality can tax crown land leased out to private interests.

Campbell said the move by the cabinet to change the boundaries can be seen in the same light as its insistence that B.C. has the right to decide whether oil drilling will be allowed in the Strait of Georgia.

(Campbell said last week that the cabinet committee on land use is united in opposing offshore oil drilling. It will insist on drilling from land only to get at underwater oil resources, if any are discovered.)

●

"The importance of British Columbia's jurisdiction cannot be overlooked," Campbell said in throwing his support behind Delta. Environmental control is a provincial prerogative, he said, adding that B.C. co-operates with federal agencies on matters such as pollution control.

Asked what B.C. would do if the NHB rejects the view that the boundary extension makes its leased land taxable, Campbell replied:

"I would find it unthinkable that the federal government would ignore the wishes of the legislature of British Columbia."

No-Fault Competition 'Fierce'

Competition among automobile insurance companies selling the compulsory no-fault accident benefits coverage will become "fierce" as time goes on, the president of the B.C. Insurance Agents Association said Wednesday.

Jack Robertson of Kamloops said that already among 23 different compaines represented by his own agency, there are nine different rates for the no-fault insurance coverage.

"The hang-up now is that there is just no experience with the new plan," he told a press conference here.

ASKS PROBE

New Democratic Party Leader Dave Barrett had asked for a federal investigation of pricing in the automobile insurance industry. The setting of a $21.90 price by the Insurance Bureau of Canada on the no-fault coverage was cited as evidence that a common price may have been arrived at by the industry.

Robertson said he could foresee a change in the flat-rate system of charging for the new coverage until actuarial experience is developed.

The flat-rate system means that drivers pay the same amount for the coverage regardless of accident risk.

Robertson said he sees no prospect of the provincial government going into the business of selling the no-fault coverage. There wouln't be any point in it unless "dramatic savings" in premiums could be effected, he said, adding that the record in Saskatchewan does not show that a government insurance scheme produces big savings.

'I Did It Because I Loved Her'

A jury of six men and six women are expected to begin deliberating their verdict later today in the non-capital murder trial of Lawrence Ernest Munning.

Munning, 41, of Colwood, is on trial at the Victoria Law Courts for the second time following the death of his wife, Catherine Josephine, 36, last June 2.

The B.C. Appeal court ordered a retrial after he was found guilty of non-capital murder by a Victoria jury Oct. 9.

MISADVISED

Application for the retrial was based on a defence claim the jury was misadvised by a court officer.

"I loved my wife, but I didn't want to commit her to Essondale (a mental hospital). She wanted to die. I promised her I would not let them send her to a place like that," said a statement signed by the accused and introduced in evidence Wednesday.

"My wife was very hard to live with, but I didn't kill her because I hated her. I did it because I loved her. She was going to kill herself anyway. She told her doctors that," the statement said.

"I went out and cashed a lot of cheques. I thought we would spend a few days having a good time and then I would kill her."

In his statement Munning detailed how he and his wife drove to a Goldstream Park campsite. After they had lunch and drank whisky and wine, Mrs. Munning fell asleep on the front seat of the car.

"When she fell asleep I cut a piece off the hose in the trunk and I put it in the exhause pipe. I pushed the other end through a hole I had bored in the bottom of the car.

"I rolled up the windows and started the car. Then I sat down at the picnic table . . ."

About an hour later, after he believed his wife to be dead, he drove to the Colwood RCMP station, court was told.

At another point in Munning's statement he said: "I was going to kill myself too but I chickened out. I know I'm responsible . . ."

Crown counsel George MacMinn closed his case after introduction of the statement. Scheduled for today were final addresses by him and defence counsel Brian Smith and the charge by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton.

Loyola Probe Scheduled

MONTREAL (CP) — A Quebec government inquiry into a dispute over the rehiring of 27 professors at Loyola College will be conducted by Perry Meyer, a law professor at McGill University, the Quebec education department announced Wednesday.

Prof. Meyer, 42, is to file reports to both Loyola and the education department "within two or three weeks."

The west-end Loyola campus was closed this week following protest meetings and a sit-in at the administration building by students and faculty opposed to the administration's decision not to rehire the 27 professors.

The government was asked to step in by a delegation representing the professors being dropped by the administration.

Kremlin Orders Major Oil Push

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Kremlin today ordered a huge increase in oil production in western Siberia and set a target of 230,000,000 to 260,000,000 tons by 1980.

A government and Communist party decree, carried on the front page of all main newspapers, envisaged the speeding up of oil extraction in the region which would bring at least a 10-fold increase in the next 10 years.

The decree demanded an acceleration of the present growth rate of western Siberia's oil industry, which it said even now is unprecedented with extraction nearly doubled in the last two years.

The directives of the 23rd party congress in 1966 set a target of 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 tons for 1970, but this total now will be at least 30,000,000 tons the decree said.

The decision to boost development follows the discovery of large oil and gas deposits in the area in recent years. Oil procurement by 1975 would be 100,000,000 to 120,000,000 tons, the decree said.

He Promises to Be Tough, Competent

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The Christmas cards of the Robert Bourassas featured one of those tender fireplace scenes with Papa Robert seated beside his wife Andree and their children, Francois, 10, and Michelle, 3.

But, like other publicity pictures of the Quebec Liberal leadership candidate at this stage, there was something strikingly uncharacteristic about the Bourassa pose:

His right fist was clenched. Furthermore, he was wearing a sport turtleneck, instead of one of his arch-conservative suits that stamp him as a dollar-district man.

The whole thing made him look more like a rugged quarterback than like a lanky intellectual.

But the public relations prop was not altogether pointless because in fact this fresh figure in Quebec politics has an air of plainness which is deceptive.

Mr. Bourassa, at 36 the youngest member of the Liberal caucus, has the built-in competitiveness, the determination, self-discipline and ambition of an individual who has been a scholarship student since his teen years.

ENDURANCE IS ASSET

Often frail-looking in photos, he has the stamina of a first-class swimmer, which he is. Physical endurance is no mean asset in a four-month campaign in a province as large as Quebec.

Mr. Bourassa's blue-ribbon education as lawyer and economist, including degrees from both Oxford and Harvard, have provided a solid base for his candidacy.

He is also wealthy. His wife is the daughter of the late Joseph Simard, founder of the shipyards at Sorel, Que.

The millionaire Simard family, incidentally, has a reputation as a kingmaker in the provincial Liberal party, which it helped to finance during its difficult Duplessis years.

These are some of the reasons why Mr. Bourassa, first elected to the legislature in 1966, has emerged as a strong contender for the job of retired Jean Lesage.

Mr. Bourassa prepared for the Jan. 16-17 leadership convention with a glossy, high-spending campaign which, paradoxically, had as its theme the need for austere, business-like government in Quebec province in the 1970s.

SAYS JOBS NEEDED

As the Liberal Opposition's financial critic, Mr. Bourassa argues that Quebec "is in a very bad way."

The situation, as described by Mr. Bourassa:

—During the '60s the provincial budget increased five-fold with expenses rising faster than revenues since 1963-64. Expenses now are rising at the rate of 15 per cent and revenues eight per cent.

—Quebec needs to create 50,000 new jobs a year for the next five years for university and college graduates, but in 1968 only 3,000 new jobs were created. Forty-three per cent of Canada's unemployed are in Quebec.

—"The flight of capital is a brutal concrete fact." He claims investment in Ontario in 1968 was 20 times the amount of investment in Quebec.

—The government is in "a financial impasse" since Quebec's taxes are among Canada's highest and it has recourse to the bond market only at record-high interest rates.

What Mr. Bourassa proposes is government by "competent, tough, talented managers," who would raise funds for development through administrative efficiency.

He estimates that within two or three years five to 10 per cent of the existing $3,000,000,000 budget could be freed as development funds by eliminating wasteful expenditures.

Mr. Bourassa looks at Quebec's social troubles from an economic perspective, saying economic development is "the essential condition for maintenance of political stability."

He also thinks "an important obstacle to political stability is the fact that a great number of Quebec's Francophones are forced to work uniquely in English."

ADVOCATES FRENCH

For this reason Mr. Bourassa is a firm advocate of making French the language of work in Quebec province, one manifestation of his latent nationalism.

Like the other two candidates, Mr. Bourassa would "restore the climate of confidence in Quebec." If elected premier he would have "business-like" relations with Ottawa.

As an individual who has lectured at French-language universities since his own formal education was completed, Mr. Bourassa says Quebec's youth want job in French, not separatism.

But as a politician who claims to be on the same wave length as Quebec's younger generation, Mr. Bourassa says young people here are "revolted by the unfairness and inefficiency that surrounds them."

One of the fascinating features of the Bourassa candidacy was the far-ranging nature of his support within the Liberal party, especially in its legislative wing.

He had the support of people who abhor separatism and think he is the man who can stop it, and the support of people who are considered separatists in the Liberal household.

The dozen members of the 46-member caucus who supported Mr. Bourassa's candidacy included most of the members elected for the first time in the 1966 general election.

One of Mr. Bourassa's supporters—and personal friends—is renegade Liberal Yves Michaud, who bolted the caucus to vote against the Union Nationale government's language bill.

GETS TO LEVESQUE

His supporters also include former transport minister Claire Kirkland Casgrain, who openly describes Mr. Michaud as separatist, and William Tetley, Liberal legislature member for Montreal Notre-Dame-de-Grace, who says:

"Bourassa is the one person who really gets to Rene Levesque (the separatist leader). He is the one person Levesque cannot answer. That's why the federalists are getting around Bourassa."

One of the reasons Mr. Bourassa won such diverse support was that many see him as the rallying point for renewal in both the Liberal party and in Quebec politics.

Furthermore, Mr. Bourassa was known to be former premier Lesage's personal choice as his successor, although Mr. Lesage maintained he was playing a strictly neutral role in the race.

There were two good indications that Mr. Lesage had chosen Mr. Bourassa as the man to relaunch the "quiet revolution" that went awry soon after it started:

The other was the solid block of Bourassa delegates in the Quebec City region, especially in Mr. Lesage's riding of Louis-Hebert.

To win such support, Mr. Bourassa has undergone a certain amount of what separatist leader Levesque calls "maquillage," or political makeup.

For one thing he toned down the economic nationalism he displayed in 1967 when he was involved in long conversations with Mr. Levesque over his political future.

Mr. Levesque, still a member of the Liberal party at the time, consulted Mr. Bourassa in working out the sovereignty-association thesis that led to the founding of the separatist Parti Quebecois.

Mr. Bourassa makes no effort to hide his friendship with Mr. Levesque, but insists that his efforts consisted of examining the Levesque document and disagreeing with it.

However, Mr. Bourassa broke with Mr. Levesque over the separatist question and now regards the separatist leader as a sentimental fiddler. Mr. Bourassa expresses this by saying:

"I like playing with the slide-rule. Rene likes to play the fiddle."

However, if Mr. Bourassa judges separatism with a slide-rule, his attitude to Canada as a nation is similar. He once said he feels no sentimental attachment to Canada.

While he considers the existing constitution "the dusty relic of a past age," Mr. Bourassa thinks Quebec can best develop economically and culturally in the federal system.

CONVENTION FRIDAY

QUEBEC—The provincial Liberal leadership convention starts Friday in Quebec City with the leader to be selected Saturday.

Three candidates for the vacancy left by retired Jean Lesage are Robert Bourassa, Pierre Laporte and Claude Wagner.

Superman Role Easy For Quebec Crusader

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — No leadership campaign worthy of political jargon would be complete without "a candidate of the people."

In the campaign for leadership of the Quebec Liberal party "le candidat du peuple" was Claude Wagner, 44, a former provincial justice minister.

His name has been a household word in Quebec for years.

Even before he entered politics in 1964, he had built up a reputation as a crusading Crown prosecutor and tough-talking judge.

In fact, Mr. Wagner is something of a one-man phenomenon in Quebec politics, like Rene Levesque and Real Caouette. He has his own following, including many people who don't trust politicians but who think Mr. Wagner is untouchably honest.

In an interview before the Jan. 16-17 leadership convention, Mr. Wagner explained why he thinks the masses love him.

"They have faith in a man. It is a confidence which stems from deep down."

As an authoritarian, with personal charm to boot, Mr. Wagner enjoys popularity in a Quebec beset by social troubles. He represents "law and order" at a time of violence, such as the terrorist bombings and the high crime rate in Montreal.

MEETINGS EXCITING

For many he is a sort of Superman and Batman and every other good guy who ever clouted down evil in the comics.

Mr. Wagner's platform for leadership is his hard-rock personality: He is the self-styled solution to problems of what he calls wishy-washy leadership. His views on non-criminal matters appear almost incidental. He never talks policy elaborately. And no one seems to mind.

Yet his political meetings ripple with excitement. His people like him because, in his words, he speaks to them "in the white of their eyes."

The index of legislature debates makes him look like a one-dimensional man. Almost all subjects he has discussed appear under criminal headings.

In the throne speech debate in 1967, Mr. Wagner expressed his constitutional thinking in capsule form: "I believe in Canada."

Nowadays, he says: "I am a federalist without any ulterior motives and that's it."

He rejects the party's old constitutional line of special status for Quebec as separatism in disguise.

He favors "adult federalism" which involves "firmness and a common-sense approach" in negotiations with the central government.

As a law-and-order man, Mr. Wagner has a wonderful way of reducing problems to comic-strip simplicity. This aspect of the Wagnerian personality has best been expressed by Quebec's political cartoonists.

SYMBOL IS CLUB

The ymbol of Mr. Wagner in the cartoons is "la matraque," the policeman's club, a reminder of Wagnerian justice.

This image of the politician tends to persist in the population. Take this testimonial of a Quebec City cabbie:

"Our politicians are a bunch of noodles. If Wagner were premier he'd go into the streets and arrest the agitators himself."

Yet Mr. Wagner is unpredictable, defying those who would cartoon him away as a political policeman. One example of this came up during the leadership campaign, when the City of Montreal imposed a ban on public demonstrations.

Robert Bourassa, the intellectual candidate, came out in favor of the Montreal move. Even leftist Rene Levesque, the separatist leader, gave it qualified support.

But Claude Wagner, with a reputation among the Liberals as a rightist, criticized the ban on demonstrations as retrograde.

Such stand-taking may confuse some, but Mr. Wagner says the people know him and understand what he represents.

"Deep down, the people know that it is not a question of being in favor of law and order for law and order's sake. I think what they respect in a man in his quality of decision, of leadership and the fact that he can stand up and face any crisis."

CALLS ON PEOPLE

"The people" may think so, but many in the 46-member Liberal caucus did not think fondly of Mr. Wagner as a possible leader.

Only five men in the caucus came out in support of him, including former cabinet minister Bona Arsenault, who says:

"It doesn't matter what genius we elect. If he isn't elected by the public we are going to remain in the Opposition. All the public opinion surveys show that Claude Wagner is one of the most popular politicians in Quebec."

This is Mr. Wagner's super-argument. He asks Liberals: "Are you going to refuse to listen to the voice of the people?"

He is so convinced the people want him and need him that he has said "Quebec will slip towards anarchy" if he is not elected leader.

Renegade Liberal Yves Michaud once said: "Most members would rather remain in the Opposition than be in power with Wagner as leader."

Many members of the governing Union Nationale party and separatist Parti Quebecois say they fear Mr. Wagner as a formidable electoral foe. Many Liberal members of the legislature appear to fear him for other reasons.

CLAIMED MANDATE

One Liberal says: "He is another Maurice Duplessis, catering to the prejudices of the people."

One thing is clear—Mr. Wagner is a crusader. He campaigns in politics with the faith and fervor of an unstoppable evangelist.

He felt he had a mandate from the people to lead a grassroots movement aimed at kicking out former premier Jean Lesage as party leader.

Mr. Wagner demanded a leadership convention and, at first, many people shrugged him off. But he kept the pressure on Mr. Lesage.

One of his tactics was a speech-making campaign criticizing the Liberals as a moribund machine controlled by professionals cut off from the people. The crusader got his way. Mr. Lesage announced his resignation last August to make way for the January convention.

Before he began crusading in politics, Mr. Wagner had a brief, but brilliant, career crusading against crime.

He became an outspoken critic of the administration of justice, aiming controversial barbs at Montreal's legal establishment. He set out on a personal campaign to convict rapists, murderers, bank robbers and arsonists, becoming a self-appointed public protector.

Federalism Okay—If It's in Vogue

QUEBEC (CP) — In the ante-room to Pierre Laporte's office are 10 filing cabinets, containing the clippings, statements and what-have-you collected during the 22 years Mr. Laporte has been around Quebec City as journalist and politician.

For Pierre Laporte the parliamentarian, House leader of Quebec's Liberal Opposition, the files are an invaluable information bank. They help to explain his success as a talented debater in the parliamentary community, which ticks on talk from the files.

But the files also tell something about the man who became a candidate for leadership of the Liberal party.

In 1963, when the associate-states theory was in vogue, Mr. Laporte was saying Canada was moving toward "a federation of sovereign states."

Then municipal affairs minister, he forecast that Quebec would eventually have "nearly all the prerogatives of an independent state."

Later, with the special-status theory officially in style in the Liberal party, Mr. Laporte was one of its strong supporters.

In April, 1968, he was quoted by a Quebec City newspaper as saying special status for Quebec is a condition for Canada's survival.

SUPPORTED TRUDEAU

At this time Prime Minister Trudeau was heading towards a federal election victory, dismissing both associate states and special status as nonsense.

Mr. Laporte issued a statement giving his support to Mr. Trudeau, expressing disgust with what he called the smuttiness of some of the prime minister's Quebec opponents. He and other provincial Liberals were attacked by the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir for "opportunisme gluant"—slippery opportunism.

Under pressure from Ottawa, after the Trudeau victory, the Quebec Liberals began the painful political process of abandoning their special-status stand. Mr. Laporte made the appropriate political sounds, saying Quebecers should not make a dogma out of their differences.

In an interview during the provincial leadership campaign, he said:

"Very clearly and very categorically, I see Quebec as a member of the Canadian community. Pierre Laporte as leader of the Liberal party will not permit any policies which are separatist or sovereignist."

In a 60-page position paper, the leadership candidate has come out for what he describes in French as "un federalisme de conjoncture." This is explained as a federalism "adapted periodically to the economic and political conjuncture, conforming to the evolution of Ottawa-Quebec relations."

IS IT OPPORTUNISM?

What does this mean?

One cynical, but apparently accurate, answer is: federalism according to the political winds—that is, opportunism.

This interpretation is supported by the attitude of a Laporte aide who, in explaining the federalism formula, said:

"Fluctuation on the constitutional front is not a problem peculiar to Mr. Laporte. It is in fact a problem of the entire Quebec Liberal party. But as a politician who has moved around a lot on this issue Mr. Laporte bears the burden of this experience in the public place."

One of Quebec's political cartoonists chose a skate as the symbol for the 48-year-old lawyer—in French "un patin." In politics the word "patinage" or skating is used to signify the shiftiness of a politician, his ability to dodge and fake.

This unflattering image of Mr. Laporte, invoking as it does all that is old and questionable about politics, isn't only projected in cartoons.

In a confrontation with hostile students at the University of Sherbrooke early in his campaign, he was heckled: "Pas de patinage."

While not all cartoons are unkind and not all students are hostile, such incidents remain frustrating for a man of the calibre of Mr. Laporte.

Rare are the politicians at Quebec City who can match the effort he has made to prepare himself for leadership.

FATHER WAS REBEL

He was born Feb. 27, 1921, at Montreal, one of seven children in the family of a general practitioner. Political debates raged around the supper table.

"My father was nationalist and anti-liberal," Mr. Laporte says. "In fact he was against the government, no matter what its political color."

The youth's flair for debate manifested itself at the University of Montreal's law school where he won college debating awards twice before graduation in 1945.

As a student he worked for the old Montreal Le Canada, a politically Liberal newspaper and "the best school of journalism in French Canada at the time."

A sports enthusiast and keen Montreal Canadiens hockey fan, Mr. Laporte learned English by reading Dink Carroll's sports columns in the Montreal Gazette.

On graduation, he joined Le Devoir and was assigned to cover the legislature in the spring of 1948. At that time its publisher was Gerard Filion, crusading against the Union Nationale regime of the late Maurice Duplessis.

For 12 years Mr. Laporte was the legislature correspondent for the independent newspaper, working his way into the late premier's dog-house.

Mr. Laporte got in the last word in the scrap, writing in 1960 a book entitled Le Vrai Visage de Duplessis—The True Face of Duplessis.

In his rapid rise from the Le Devoir journalist to "quiet revolution" politician, Mr. Laporte gained the reputation of an ambitious man with an eye on the leadership.

Critics Hail Canadian Tenor

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Jon Vickers returned to the London opera stage Wednesday night and gave what one critic called "a touch of genius" to Covent Garden's new production of Fidelio, the only opera composed by Beethoven.

The Canadian tenor's rendering of Florestan's aria to freedom from the depths of his prison cell struck most critics as the highspot of the evening.

Daily Telegraph critic Peter Stadlen described it as "a compound of physical exhaustion and spiritual intensity such as one rarely encounters . . . a deeply felt and thought-out performance."

Philip Hope-Wallace in The Gurardian considered the production as a whole fell just short of the "transcendant Beethoven experience" he had hoped for, but added: "The one real touch of genius came from Jon Vickers, whose cries of hope out of prison darkenss really touched the heart: He is a superb Florestan."

The Times judges Vickers, a native of Prince Albert, Sask., and Britain's Gwyneth Jones to be perfectly suited in the leading roles — Big, well-matched voices and big, well-matched personalties."

"Jon Vickers sometimes from below, and occasionally the tone sounded thinnish and too grainy at the top. But mostly it was ample, passionate and strongly masculine."

Financial Times critic Andrew Porter said the Canadian's interpretation of Florestan was "always cogent, always moving," but had developed still further, its "heroic tone fined down by suffering, filled with anguish of spirit." Vicker's speaking voice is also "more eleqient, more poignant than ever before," says Porter.

Statistics Released

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Crisis and Suicide Prevention Centre announced Wednesday that it has handled more than 600 calls per month during the service's first six months of operation. Statistics showed that of total calls received, 30 per cent dealt with family-marital problems and 20 per cent with alcohol and drugs.

Mishap Kills 17

CAMPINA GRANDE (AP) — A passenger train jumped the tracks and three of its cars plunged into a ravine Tuesday, killing 17 persons and injuring 60, police reported. Some of the injured were in serious condition. Campina Grande is in northeast Brazil.

Mari - Elizabeth Morgen, the featured soloist at the next Symphony concerts this Sunday and Monday, has been acclaimed as a top-ranking pianist since her early childhood. She captured awards, prizes and scholarships before her tenth birthday . . . at 10, the Frederick Harris Company published four of her piano compositions! And her early promise has been more than redeemed by later performance.
Small wonder then, that Laszlo Gati, music director and conductor of the Victoria Symphony, leapt at the chance to have her appear in Victoria. The winner of the Bach International Competition can pick and choose between concert dates, and Miss Morgen's visit to Victoria reflects the new lustre of Symphony '70. Concert-goers are assured of an outstanding musical treat, for both orchestra and soloist have been drawing rave reviews from usually hard - to - please critics. James Backas, of Washington, D.C., hailed the Canadian pianist as a "major young talent . . . very distinguished and exciting"—and local critics are united in their appreciation of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra's "great leap forward".
All in all, this first concert of 1970 looks like a fitting start to a decade of great music. The program includes Haydn's Symphony No. 94 in G major, commonly known as the "Surprise"; Mozart's Concerto for Piano in C minor, and the overture and excerpts from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by Mendelssohn.

Many Animals Lucky To Reach U.S. Alive

By JOE McGOWAN Jr.

LIMA, Peru (AP)— Deep in the Amazon jungle, a tiny woolly monkey is clinging to his mother's back when she tumbles from a tree limb, killed by a poison-tipped blowgun dart.

A week later, the baby monkey is on display in the window of a Miami pet shop, lucky to be alive.

It is estimated that as many as half the thousands of monkeys shipped each year from the Amazon die before reaching their destinations.

Walsh, of ISPA's Western Hemisphere office in Boston, was interviewed during a visit to Peru, which is probably the major exporter of wild animals in South America. Brazil, Ecuador, Venezuela and Colombia also contribute to what Walsh calls a "dangerous drain" on wildlife.

SURVEY IS NEEDED

"Officials of the governments concerned do not know themselves what a drain this export has been on wildlife," Walsh says. "An ecological survey is desperately needed, before it is too late.

"We would like to see a total ban on animal exports for six months. During this time, we hope the animals could do some re-breeding, and it would give us time to organize a meaningful survey."

There was a time when the Amazon was considered a never-ending source of tropical animal, bird and fish life. But the lucrative wildlife trade has soared, doubling in the last five years alone.

"As a result, many areas of Amazon forest are now devoid of wildlife, and even traders reluctantly admit that within 50 miles of a settlement, forest mammals are hard to find," the Peruvian Times of Lima reported recently.

EXTINCTION POSSIBLE

Just how big is the wildlife trade?

No one knows, because many of the animals are "bootlegged." One estimate is that 150,000 mammals and 2,000,000 reptiles were imported into the United States last year, most of them through Miami.

The Amazon also is home of some of the world's most desired tropical fish, and last year 12,200,000 were exported, almost all to the United States.

One problem, Walsh says, is that many Amazon Indians now make their living catching and selling animals, and would suffer if a ban were placed on exports. He adds that the governments themselves have become dependent on the hard currency income from animal sales abroad.

Term Confirmed

EDMONTON (CP) A seven-year term was confirmed Monday for Walter Prokopchuk, 44, sentenced for causing an explosion at Edmontonn's municipal courthouse. The appeal, against the sentence imposed last October, was dismissed by the appelate division of the Supreme Court of Alberta.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of your hair loss," says Harrison trichologist to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. They are sending a specialist here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Fri. and Sat.

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and growing thicker hair—will be demonstrated in Victoria this Friday and Saturday, January 16 and 17.

This news was released here today by A. B. Harrison, internationally famous director of Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In the announcement, Harrison named staff trichologist T. Cronshaw to conduct the Victoria clinic. Cronshaw will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Hotel Sussex.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Cronshaw," director Harrison said. "Your only obligation is to yourself — to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause baldness."

Who Can Be Helped?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Harrison sincerely. "We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do," declared Harrison. But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate — and baldish — by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything.' So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Cronshaw in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Harrison method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Friday and Saturday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Cronshaw's suite number.

You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

Liberals To Focus On Taxes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Taxation, poverty and British Columbia's place in Confederation will dominate policy-making for B.C. Liberals at their three-day convention which begins tonight.

They plan to set party policy for the next session of the provincial legislature, which starts Jan. 22, and look at poverty, federal tax reform proposals the use of illicit drugs and oil drilling in the Strait of Georgia.

In a closed session today, they also hope to set strategy for improving party strength in B.C.

The Liberals lost one seat in the Social Credit election sweep last August and now have five members in the legislature.

"New programs for the attack on poverty, the development of cities, the control of pollution and the provision of education cannot operate without provincial participation," said Dr. Pat McGeer, the party's leader.

"As a consequence it will not be good enough for Liberals to set down policies for the 70s aimed only at the federal government.

"Policies . . . must be set all across the country aimed at provincial governments as well."

EXPECT 450 DELEGATES

One of the highest priorities for the 1970s, says Tex Enemark, an unsuccessful provincial candidate in the Prince George riding and now a law student, will be to increase the income of the poor.

He will present a paper calling for a guaranteed annual income to help out the "25 per cent of Canadian families which are poor."

The party will also study the province's role in Confederation and consolidation of national policies during a session Friday.

The federal white paper on taxation will be discussed by Bob Dickerson, a law professor at the University of B.C. and a member of the Carter commission on taxation. He is director of the federal study group on the Canada Corporations Act.

Resolutions include one from Vancouver-Burrard Liberls calling for disarmament, with only a coast guard, civil defence force and a United Nations observation force retained.

Northerners Said Denied Self-Rule

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — The federal government is depriving citizens of the Northwest Territories of a direct voice in their own affairs, an appointed member of the territorial council said Tuesday.

Air Marshal Hugh Campbell (retired) of Ottawa told the 41st session of the council the Northwest Territories must have an executive council sensitive to the wishes and requirements of the north's electorate.

He said an executive council —which would include elected representatives—would co-ordinate financial programs, prepare budgets and legislation and would serve the function of a provincial cabinet.

"The establishment of an executive council is necessary to progress in the direction of a provincial type of government. It is the next stage past the colonial government that we have now."

Jean Chretien, minister of Indian affairs and northern development, did not mention the executive council proposal in a policy statement on territorial government development last November. The Carrothers advisory commission on development of the territorial government recommended such a council in 1966.

Air Marshal Campbell said he will ask Ottawa to include an executive council in amendments now being drafted for the Northwest Territories Act.

He told the session—which convened Monday—that establishment of a committee system as an alternative to an executive council is "just avoiding the granting to the electorate of the territories what is their just right."

VIEWS SUPPORTED

He was supported by D. H. Searle, elected member for Mackenzie North, who said Mr. Chretien has promised an executive council to the Yukon territorial government.

Mr. Searle said the council should bring the matter to Prime Minister Trudeau when he visits Yellowknife in March for the arctic winter games.

Air Marshal Campbell said each member of the executive council would be charged with the responsibility of one or more government departments.

POLLUTION CONTROL 'LARGELY USELESS'

OTTAWA (CP)—The Conservative party said today the government's pollution control bill now before the Commons is "completely ineffective, pitifully weak" and "largely useless."

In a statement, the Conservatives said the bill would result in a new form of pollution: red tape fouling up all pollution control efforts.

Soldiers to Train for Peace-Keeping

By ROBERT EASTABROOK

UNITED NATIONS (WP) — A novel effort to train officials from many countries for possible world peacekeeping roles will be inaugurated in Vienna this summer by a new organization called the International Peace Academy.

Sparkplug of the effort is Maj. Gen. Indar Jit Rikhy, the retired Indian Army officer who was the last commander of the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) in the Middle East before it was disbanded in 1967. Gen. Rikhye, who serves as academy president, also represented the UN in the Dominican Republic.

Associated with him in the academy are two men also intimately connected with UN peacekeeping activities — Gen. E. L. M. Burns of Canada, a previous UNEF commander, and Rajeshwar Dayal of India, who was UN representative in the Congo.

The peace academy has two objectives, according to Rikhye — to prepare persons who may be asked by world or regional organizations to play a third-party role in conflict situations, and to give scholars involved in peace research practical orientation.

Accordingly the academy will offer two courses in Vienna from July 15 to Sept. 18. Each will be open to approximately 40 persons — diplomats, military officers, administrative officials, and representatives of non-governmental organizations such as the Red Cross and church groups.

The Austrian government has made the facilities of its diplomatic academy in Vienna available for the pilot courses.

AEC Will Prove Within Year Canada's N-Plant 'Workable'

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will show the world within a year that the Canadian system of producing electricity from nuclear energy is worthwhile and workable, the president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., said Wednesday.

J. Lorne Gray gave that as his reply to renewed criticism of Canada's reliance on a natural-uranium, heavy-water power reactor system, the major responsibility of AECL, a federal Crown agency.

The Senate science policy committee is reported to be ready to recommend that the federal government reassess the nuclear program which has involved years of effort and more than $1,000,000,000.

Ontario Hydro also is under fire for adopting the Canadian system for its nuclear generating program when other countries have abandoned it or passed it up.

WILL STAND TEST

"In a year, Douglas Point will be a demonstration that even the senators would be prepared to accept," Mr. Gray said in an interview expressing confidence in the Canadian system.

Douglas Point is the $89,000,000 nuclear generator on Lake Huron being run by Ontario Hydro under AECL supervision pending its sale to the utility at a subsidized price of between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.

Ever since the Senate committee visited Europe last summer there have been recurring reports that a new look will be recommended for the Canadian system.

The committee chairman, Senator Maurice Lamontagne, has said publicly the committee members have some worries and doubts arising from their European tour.

Mr. Gray said Wednesday he had discussed with the federal government hiring outside consultants to make a reassessment.

CAN EXPECT CRITICISM

Such a step by AECL would be open to the criticism that the assessors were hand-picked to whitewash the Canadian effort, he said.

Federally-appointed assessors would amount to the federal government sitting in judgment on the decision of Ontario Hydro, the 'provincially-owned utility, to adopt the Canadian system.

Nevertheless, he said he has made it plain he has no objection to an assessment and is confident objective examination will show Canada made the right decision to concentrate on developing the natural-uranium, heavy-water reactor system.

Such an assessment was made in the early 1960s by a Commons committee which backed the government decision to have AECL develop the Canadian reactor system.

Mr. Gray said he would prefer to see a year's delay before another is made. By then, Douglas Point will demonstrate its worth.

Accounts Given

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Two young Vietnamese women who say they survived alleged U.S. massacres in their country began a European tour Tuesday to tell their stories. They are Vo Thi Lien, 12, who said she survived the alleged My Lai killings, and Pham Thi Lien, 21, a Viet Cong fighter who described an alleged massacre in the Ba Lang An region.

GOOD NEWS ON NUCLEAR BLASTS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear scientist reports good news for conservationists who fear that using nuclear explosives to build dams, canals and harbors will pollute the earth with radiation.

Dr. B. Clark Groseclose of the University of California's Lawrence Radiation Laboratory at Livermore, Calif., said Wednesday final tests are under way in Nevada on a nuclear explosive for underground use that is virtually free of harmful radiation.

•

Development of the explosive, he said, is the result of years of research to find the right combination of nuclear reactions, fuels and shielding.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is at 11:40 p.m. on Channel 2—Seance on a Wet Afternoon. It's an English drama produced in 1964 and starring Kim Stanley, Richard Attenborough and Mark Eden. Miss Stanley won a New York Film Critic's Award for her portrayal of a frustrated professional medium.

BILL COSBY. 8, Channels 2 and 6. This one is an entertaining episode, with Moms Mabley and Mantan Moreland featured as Chet's uncle and aunt, who have been battling for 30 years.

DIAMOND LIL'S. 10:30, Channel 8. Singer Billy Van and honky-tonk pianist Billy O'Connor join the regulars.

THE UNDERSEA WORLF OF JACQUES COUSTEAU. 7:30, Channel 4. "The Night of the Squid." This intriguing nature hour happened by accident when the crew of the Calypso discovered massive packs of squid surrounding the ship off the California coast. For 72 hours, cameras observe the mating and procreative cycle of the marine animal, and tells a story that's the salmon spawn all over again. The squid, in a sexual frenzy, grapple with egg-ripe females and then become corpses above the egg cases securely anchored on the ocean floor. After this fascinating display, Cousteau and a lady zoologist give us a science lesson, inspecting squid eggs under the microscope. Viewers are urged to hang on and watch the pulsating embryos reach the hatching stage, ready for "the dance of life," in the words of narrator Rod Serling.

THE BOB HOPE CHRISTMAS SPECIAL. 8:30, Channel 5. Beginning with a White House dinner, Bob and his all-girl guests take a 15-day round-the-world tour of the troops, stopping off in Berlin, Italy, Turkey and Saudi Arabia, before spending a week in Vietnam. Connie Stevens sings "Bill" to GIs of the same name; "Laugh-In's" Teresa Graves, the Golddiggers and Suzanne Charny wriggle for the audience; and Hope's punchlines echo from every performance. One of his best before a throng of 30,000 at Long Bin is "This surprises me, President Nixon thinks you're all home." Christmas shows at Da Nang, Camp Eagle, aboard the Ranger, and a Thailand palace dinner are emphasized along with quick one-liners from 60 interviews held by our traveller.

THIS IS TOM JONES. 9, Channel 4. In addition to songs by our host and his guest star Shani Wallis including "Where Is Love?" and "Let the Sun Shine In," there's South American singer Raphael throbbing to "I Believe," George Gobel offering "The Whole Town's Talking About the Jones Boy," and those rock 'n' rolling Rascals singing "Hold On" and "In the Midnight Hour" with their host.

DEAN MARTIN. 8:30, Channel 8; 10, Channel 5. Ladies have the evening off as Sammy Davis Jr., Andy Griffith and Paul Lynde take over the show. Sammy and Dean horse around in a medley and Sammy offers "Wichita Lineman." Andy Griffith plays a carnival barker who sings to a tattooed lady, and then reverts to his Dad character, explaining sex to son Dean. Paul Lynde handles the remaining routines as a dance lesson salesman, and a nightclub piano player being heckled by Martin and Griffith.

DICK CAVETT SHOW. 11:30, Channel 4. Movie buffs are promised a special treat tonight with brilliant Italian director Federico Fillini listed on the Cavett schedule, along with Tony Curtis and Brazilian guitarist Louis Bonfa.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

GO — GO — GO
WITH 1970
K and C
THERMOGLASS

AND AWAY WE GO!!

17' K and C Thermoglass — did you read about the 15'8"? — well here it is all over again in 17', but much bigger. Do you want to fish Sooke all day? or run home from East Point at 3 in the afternoon? Then try this one on for size — her Vee hull will tame the white waters for you. She's a 17' Thermoglass.

Come out this Saturday and see for yourself. We think you'll agree with us.

Haddock Denies Conflict Claim In Cemetery Appointment

Mayor Courtney Haddock this morning challenged suggestions that there could be a conflict of interest if Laverne Sands became a Victoria representative on the Royal Oak Cemetery Committee.

Sands has interests in a local funeral parlor.

"But," said Haddock at a meeting of the city's finance committee "I think the industry should be represented on this board. I think it would be a good thing. We need somebody on that board who knows the business."

Haddock made the statement in answer to an objection from Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis that a funeral parlor operator should be placed on the cemetery board.

Curtis said the move was the same as council appointing a firm of auditors in which an alderman had a substantial interest.

Haddock's reply to that was that Victoria shouldn't be influenced by Saanich thinking.

"GOOD MAN'

"He (Sands) is a good man and will do well on this board," he said.

Chairman Ald. Percy Frampton didn't agree with the mayor.

"I'm not objecting to the man," he said. "I'm objecting to any member of the undertaking profession being on the cemetery board."

On the vote Haddock and Ald. Tom Christie voted in favor of recommending the appointment to city council. Ald. Ove Witt voted against and Frampton said "I guess I have to go in the affirmative."

In other finance committee business the provisional budget for the Greater Victoria Library Board was described as "an exercise in futility" by Haddock while Christie saved his criticism for the Regional District provisional budget.

Christie said he objected to any budget provisional or otherwise, coming down without comparative figures from last year.

"You'd have to go all over hell's half acre to find out how things fit in," he said. "I don't know who's responsible for doing this but it's a bad job."

City manager Dennis Young tried to smooth things down by noting that the provisional budget merely showed expenditures which will eventually be divided on a pro rata basis between all participating municipalities.

Christie had a second objection as he expressed surprise that regional board directors got paid $25 a month for attending regular meetings.

"What's this?" he asked. "Double remuneration! Most of these people are aldermen and are already getting paid."

It was pointed out that many members of the regional board are still working people and therefore lose substantially when attending meetings.

Christie, who is retired, said he felt they were getting paid twice for doing the same job.

The committee agreed to instruct city solicitor T. P. O'Grady to proceed with legal action to collect $2,073 in back taxes from Ideal Fuel, Tyee Road.

BOX CRUSHES SANDING CREW

GOLD RIVER, — Two employees of the Tahsis Co. were killed early today when they were crushed under a dump-truck box while sanding a logging road.

The tip of the partially-open truck box apparently struck a guy line strung across the road and attached to logging equipment. The forward motion of the truck flipped the men and the box onto the road.

Dockmen Study New Proposals

B.C. longshoremen are considering a proposal put before their representatives Wednesday by Maritime Employers Association in an effort to resolve a seven-month dispute at Pacific ports.

Association spokesman E. M. Strang said International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union indicated it may be ready to reply to the offer Friday, but the union said there is nothing new in the proposal.

Strang said the presentation constitutes a complete change in the agreement to conform to a changing industry.

He said it was too involved to describe in detail, but one area dealt with is the matter of automation, about which there had been considerable dispute and concern in the past.

"Someone put the fear in these men that they'd be out of their jobs in six months," Strang said, adding that such a position is unfounded.

Longshoremen struck for two months between September and November until federal intervention resulted in a 90-day truce in which an agreement was to be attempted.

Longshoremen's president Robert Peebles, who succeeded Andy Kotowich, under whom previous negotiations were conducted, said the proposal offered Wednesday was the same one rejected by the membership in first voting last summer.

"I have nothing else to say," he added.

The current negotiations began Friday after newly-elected leaders of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union had drafted their contract proposals.

Strang had described these proposals as "completely unreaslistic regarding wages and reactionary regarding restrictions on the work force."

The union leaders asked for a $1.62 hourly wage boost in two stages in a new contract and presented a document to the employers on waterfront working conditions that contained more than 100 itemized proposals.

The last rejected settlement had proposed an 85-cent hourly wage increase over 27 months on the present base rate of $3.88 an hour.

JERICHO COMPLAINTS

A delegation of parents of deaf children will meet Education Minister Donald Brothers in his office Friday morning to discuss complaints about the administration of Jericho Hills School in Vancouver.

Another delegation headed by Emmett Casey, executive director of the Western Institute for the Deaf, met Brothers Wednesday to air complaints about operation of the school.

Casey last week criticized the school's administration, charging lack of innovation and leadership.

Mrs. Mary Margaret Moore, head of the parents' group which will meet Brothers, said later the group agrees with Casey. The parents decided at a meeting last Monday to call for an overhaul of the school's administration.

Rites Friday For City Businessman

Funeral services for well-known businessman George Harvey Bray 55, will be held in Sands Mortuary Ltd.'s Memorial Chapel of Chimes Friday at 3 p.m. Cremation will follow.

A resident of Victoria for 25 years, Bray was born in Winnipeg.

He built up the company of Bray Refrigeration Ltd. and acted as its president until his death Wednesday.

During the Second World War Bray served four years overseas as a member of the Royal Canadian Naval Voluntary Reserve.

A charter member of the Cosmopolitan Club of Victoria, he was also a member of the Kiwanis Club of Victoria and the Refrigeration Service Engineers Society.

Bray is survived by his wife, Eleanor, and daughter Beverley, both living at the family home, 2642 Dewdney; another daughter, Mrs. W. J. (Dianne) McWhinnie, also of Victoria; his mother, Mrs. John (Nellie) Scott, Vancouver, and brother, Harold Bray, North Vancouver.

College Committee

A committee to study basic problems in the formation of a southern Vancouver Island Regional College has been formed as a result of a meeting here Wednesday.

Education Minister Donald Brothers said the committee has been asked to "go right to work" but indicated there is no firm schedule for establishment of a regional college in the area.

William Reid, assistant superintendent of university education, and some officials of the Greater Victoria School Board comprise the committee.

Impaired Driver Fined

A 26-year-old Central Saanich man pleaded guilty in court Wednesday to impaired driving and was fined $400.

John Wood, 7022 East Saanich Road, had been charged following a four-car crash on the Mow's Hill section of the Patricia Bay Highway Jan. 13 that sent two women to hospital with minor injuries.

Both women were treated and released.

Corner D. G. Ashby, sitting as judge for Central Saanich, also banned Wood from driving anywhere in Canada for six months.

HOME GARDEN

Leave That Pruning Until March

By HILDA BEASTALL

Only when our winters are reasonably mild do we gardeners worry about the appearance of some of our plants. Those native to warmer climates, yet adapting to ours well enough to give us pleasure, begin to look a bit untidy by January.

Hilda

Three-foot stems, raggedy brown, are no longer attractive when we remember the grey-green, soft and lacy foliage so spicily fragrant that is endeared to all who know the plant.

In spite of the untidy appearance of this artemisia now, it will be entirely covered with new foliage during April. No cutting back should be done now, since this would encourage the growth buds, which are all along the stems, to develop during the next mild spell.

These in turn would be vulnerable to frosts that may come later, and so the normal spring growth would be depleted by that much.

Leave this shrub as it is, waiting until March end before shortening each stem by about a quarter of its length.

Santolina chamaecyparissus (grey Lavender-cotton) and the green specie, S. virens, while not becoming so messy in winter, should also be left until late March before being pruned.

The yellow marguerite, so great a favorite here for its seven or even eight months of clean daisy-like blooms, is only now going into winter retirement.

Botanically Chrepanthemum frutescens, this plant is as much a chrysanthemum as the big white Shasta daisy and the Ester Read daisy, and is also related to those half hardy plants of late summer and fall which we all know as Chrysanthemums. The marguerite used to be called Paris-daisy and even Boston-daisy.

Since it is a native to the Canary Islands off the coast of West Africa, we cannot expect the marguerite to be bone hardy in our wet and chilly winters.

In heavy wet soils we shall lose marguerites during winter; and they will not survive periods of sharp frost and freezing winds.

However, in more sheltered gardens the plants will live until spring when new growth will be produced.

To obtain the best results from marguerites, they should be pinched back frequently before being allowed to make flower buds.

This procedure takes a determined hand, for most of us are more eager to see flowers than to have a shapely healthy plant.

After a severe pruning on the old plants in late March, wait for new shoots to reach about three inches before nipping the tips.

Continue this nipping every few days all through April into May, when a fine bushy plant will be ready to bloom.

Adults Prove His Biggest Problem

TORONTO (CP) — The trouble with writing and illustrating children's books is the adults, said Maurice Sendak during a visit here.

The New York author and illustrator of about 80 childrenn's books said adults blot out a child's emotionally charged world of fantasy; as a result, children's books today were mawkish and coy.

"Children have powerful emotions — I try to express them the way I know I felt when I was a child. I search for this child — turn in on myself to find him — and I know that children say outrageous things."

He said books children are expected to read today are "simply not valid."

"Alert children write me letters and stories. They say things and draw pictures that I wouldn't be allowed to publish.

"When I did my book on Jennie — my dog — critics dealt with it as a strange book about a dog. But the children — they reacted strongly. They read between the lines of the story and they knew that Jennie had died. They wrote me that they were with me."

PROVIDES FANTASY

Mr. Sendak said apart from trying to express a child's emotions, he is aiming to fill a long-neglected need — the need for fantasy.

He said children identified immediately with Max, the hero of his book Where the Wild Things Are, illustrated profusely with uninhibited creations. Adults — "they could see only the wild things and they were horrified."

Mr. Sendak said after publication of the book five years ago he was showered with denunciations by upset adults, even by some who profess to be experts on child behavior.

Yet he is writing another one apt to arouse as much controversy as Where the Wild Things Are.

He said the book will contain illustrations of a boy—naked. "A real boy; hopefully it will be published next fall."

If the book does not turn out a moneymaker, Mr. Sendak said, he is not concerned. He already has assured himself of a sound financial income.

Same Old Story

VANCOUVER (CP) — History repeated itself for bank manager Jack Nicholson Tuesday when an armed bandit held up a Kingsway Avenue branch of the Royal Bank of Canada and escaped with $4,300. The robbery came 15 years to the day after Mr. Nicholson, then an assistant accountant at another Kingsway branch, had been forced to lie on the floor while robbers took $30,000.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Daring Pilots Began Airmail Services

By BOB BOWMAN

All first-class mail in Canada goes by air except in cases where some other method is more efficient. Although special airmail flights began in 1918 when Captain Brian Peck of the R. A. F. made a zany trip from Montreal to Toronto, the federal government did not put money into airmail until 1927 when it allocated $75,000 for the purpose. The first airmail stamp was issued in September, 1928, five cents denomination.

The groundwork for modern airmail may have been completed on January 15, 1931, when Herbert Hollick-Kenyon flew postal bags from Calgary to Lethbridge, completing a link with other prairie cities. The landing field at Lethbridge is called Kenyon in honor of the great Canadian pilot who, among many other achievements, flew U.S. Admiral Byrd to the South Pole, and Sir Hubert Wilkins throughout the Arctic.

There are amazing stories about the development of Canadian air services. The first airmail to the Arctic was flown from Edmonton to Aklavik in Dwcember 1929. The pilots were Wop May and Glyn Roberts and the route included Forts Chipewan, Smith, Resolution, and the round trip was 6,000 miles. The ground temperature would fall as low as 60 degrees below zero and mechanics had to keep the engine warm all night by using blow torches.

Prairie airmail began in 1930 when night flights were made between Winnipeg and Calgary. There were beacon lights every 10 miles, and seven powerful searchlights along the route.

Early airmail flying also included Quebec and the Maritimes. In 1927 pilot Romeo Vachon delivered mail to Quebec City by dropping it with a parachute. Another service from Moncton and Charlottetown to the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence brought mail and supplies to people who are often cut off from civilization, especially in the winter. One problem was that most people on the islands wanted Eaton's catalogues, and they were too heavy to carry. Pilot J. Cooper would try to bring four every trip, but that was the best he could do.

Other events on January 15

1836—Armed groups were prohibited in Lower Canada.

1852—Trinity College opened at Toronto.

1915—Last spike of Canadian Northern Railway from Quebec to Vancouver was driven at Basque, B.C.

Control Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday authorized Mayor Tom Campbell to write the provincial government indicating support for a proposal that anti-pollution devices be made compulsory for automobiles. The proposal was made recently by Evan Wolfe, Social Credit MLA for Vancouver Centre.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

The deal diagrammed today is presented as a mystery. You are informed that South misplayed the hand, and thereby failed to fulfill his game contract. It is your job to bring South's error to light.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♦.

North's game-forcing two club opening was an overbid, but the fact of the matter is that the final contract of three no-trump was there for the making.

After East's queen of diamonds was allowed to win the opening lead, he continued with another diamond, South taking his ace. Hoping that the four outstanding clubs were divided 2-2 (which would give him five club tricks), South then cashed his ace and king of clubs.

When it was revealed that East had a sure club trick the three no-trump contract became unmakable. Declarer then chose to lead another club. The defenders now gathered in their diamonds. What was South's error?

It was incorrect for declarer to have attacked the club suit. When four of a suit are outstanding, the mathematicians tells us that they will be divided 2-2 only 40 per cent of the time. And we all know, without being mathematicians, that a straight-forward finesse offers a 50 per cent chance of success.

Therefore, at trick three, South should have led a low heart out of his hand and finessed Dummy's queen. As the cards were divided, the finesse would have been successful, and South would have had his ninth trick.

Admittedly, if the finesse had lost, declarer might have gone down an extra trick (which would have been the case had the adversely held diamonds been divided 6-3 instead of 5-4). But surely the investment of an extra 50 points to obtain a 50 per cent chance instead of a 40 per cent one was a proposition that South should have accepted with alacrity.

INDIAN YOUNG, POOR ★ ★ ★ AREA MAN'S 'DAY' IN COURT

A Three-Time Loser . . . to Justice

By JOHN MIKA

The case was tried in Christian Victoria, on the eve of the Feast of Epiphany ending the annual celebration of the birth of the Prince of Peace, whose Sermon on the Mount — remember it?— said such things as:

The Last of a Series

"Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth . . .

"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Well, David Jones is certainly poor and certainly meek and it can be argued that he was persecuted for a righteous society's sake.

He was put there through a smooth system of cash register justice which worked routinely in his case as it has in hundreds more in the past— sending some home with a receipt for a fine and sending those who can't pay quickly into a cell.

As even federal politicians acknowledge, there are three minority groups within our society which are demonstrably oppressed — the young, the poor and the Indians.

David Jones belongs to all three.

Only 18 and already the father of two, his disadvantaged circumstances give him little prospect of steady work and so he maintains his family on a welfare dole.

He probably never should have become a family man. He certainly shouldn't have bought a used car three months ago because he couldn't afford the insurance premium, and he was too inexperienced to realize he couldn't get away without a driver's licence for long.

On Jan. 1 the provincial government's new law on compulsory automobile insurance went into force.

Two days later, a Saturday, David Jones drove from his home off the Malahat and parked in a Victoria shopping plaza lot.

It was a clear transgression of British Columbia's rules against driving without a permit and without insurance.

While daddy was shopping, one of the children in the car released the handbrake, the car rolled back and caused $30 damage when it collided with a neighboring parked car.

Took 10 Minutes to Shatter a Life

And that's when the province of British Columbia began evening up the score it had to settle with David Jones.

The crown, in the form of a Saanich police officer, arrested him and put him in jail for the weekend.

Normally, both charges of no licence and no insurance, result in a summons to court but David Jones was from out-of-town and, even though he had a fixed abode, that may have been the reason for the arrest.

Whatever the reason, the Crown, through the B.C. Motor Vehicles Act, clearly gave the policeman authority to make an arrest if he deemed it warranted in society's interest. So David Jones spent the weekend, separated from his family, in jail.

Next the system brought him up for trial before the Crown's appointed judge.

The public paid a lawyer to prosecute him, but it didn't pay any lawyer to defend him.

His case was the first application in this area of a new law but the smooth impartiality of the system wasn't broken to give any special consideration to this unique event.

Routine always has a timetable so it only took 10 minutes of our court's time, temporarily perhaps permanently, to shatter his life — and his family's.

Fund Started To Aid Olahs

By BOB MITCHELL

University of Victoria student president Norman Wright today announced plans for a fund-drive to raise a minimum of $3,000 to cover out-of-pocket expenses incurred by Nick and Linda Olah.

The fund-drive is being organized by student councils at Uvic and the University of B.C.

Olah, 21, arrived in Victoria Sunday after jumping bail in San Francisco Saturday night. He was persuaded to fly here by Wright who borrowed $800 to go down and meet him.

Linda Olah, 23, arrived here Monday.

Funds raised in the drive will be used to pay Olah's father the $1,000 he put up for his son's bail, which has now been forfeited.

Olah lost $750 in college tuition fees which he turned over to a San Francisco lawyer to arrange his bail.

Another $800 has to be paid back to two Victoria people who loaned that amount to Wright to make his trip to San Francisco and rescue the couple.

Olah also lost about $700 worth of cameras and lenses which he pawned in San Francisco earlier to get money for living expenses.

Thats a total of $3,200. If the appeal brings in more, Wright said, it will be used to establish a scholarship fund for the couple to enable them to resume college studies next fall.

Organizers also hope to create a second fund for other Canadians who run into legal difficulties with United States draft laws.

In Victoria, Nels Granewall, financial aid officer, University of Victoria;

OFFERS IN

Offers of assistance began coming as early as Wednesday evening as details of the young couple's story was carried by newspapers.

The Vancouver Sun earlier offered the Olahs $500 for exclusive rights on the story, which was published Wednesday. The Times arranged to contribute $100 of that amount to get the story the same day.

Lawyer and former Esquimalt mayor Ray Bryant will represent the Olahs at no cost while they are staying in Victoria.

Wright said Wednesday CTV, whose W-5 film of the Olahs in San Fransisco was shown Sunday, had an offer of $500 to aid them.

The network was to send a cheque to the couple shortly after the film was made, but the cheque hasn't arrived.

UNHAPPY START for the new decade — which should contain the best years of her life — came early this month for 19-year-old Ann Jones, infant daughter Jennifer and (not shown) son Martin, when her teenaged husband David was jailed here for three months because he couldn't pay fines for Motor Vehicles Act infractions. To add to Ann's problems, she's pregnant again and has been informed that welfare cheques, the family's sole support at present, will be cut proportionately while David remains in jail. City May Quit Health Board

By JIM HUME

Victoria city's finance committee this morning unanimously endorsed a recommendation that the city pull out of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

The move has come after three years of gentle persuasion failed to convince the provincial government to make public health services a regional function.

Ald. Tom Christie, the city's representative on the health board, bluntly said: "It is a gun at the head of the organization now set up, But it must be done."

Finance committee chairman Ald. Percy Frampton agreed.

LONG OVERDUE

"It's long overdue," he said. "This move is absolutely tops. It is a gun and I for one am very happy to put it up there."

Describing the existing health board system as "an administrative hodge-podge" Christie said most of the blame must be attached to the provincial government.

"Health services are so obviously a regional function," he said. "A prime function of the regional district, yet each time we ask for that we are blocked by the provincial government, our efforts thwarted."

Mayor Courtney Haddock asked Christia to be more gentle in his criticism of the provincial government until "we can be sure they're to blame."

"Have we ever had any meetings with them over this,?" he asked.

TIME AND AGAIN

"Over the past three years we have met continually with them," answered city manager Dennis Young. "We have even been assured that all arrangements have been made to make

OIL DISCOVERY REPORTED IN NORTH

Western and integrated oil stocks experienced sharp gains in active trading today on the Toronto stock market following a report that Imperial Oil has encountered a showing of oil in the Northwest Territories.

In a statement Imperial said the oil had flowed to the surface at its Atkinson Point well 50 miles northeast of Tuktoyaktuk. The oil was found when a drill stem test was conducted Wednesday at about 5,700 feet.

Victoria Walkout 'May Prod Cabinet'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said this morning he is not surprised at the Victoria city move.

"Hopefully this will serve as a prod to the provincial government to transfer health from the informally-constituted metro health board to the region," he said.

"This has been our objective for at least more than two years. Last year a health committee was established at the regional level in anticipation of this.

"It is stalled at the provincial level for reasons that are not known to me."

Asked for comment on the effect of Victoria-paid staff not working in Saanich, he replied "we'll cross that bridge when it comes."

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said "I think we would feel that if we are paying for this service the people of Esquimalt should benefit."

The board's senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, declined comment. Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford was not available for comment this morning.

Also unavailable was the health board's chairman, Mrs. Rubymay Parrott of the Saanich Peninsula School Board.

But at the board's meeting Tuesday, she commented that if Victoria said its health inspectors were only to work within the city "we would be up the creek."

Unconditional Surrender Signed by Biafran Leader

LAGOS (CP) — Biafran leader Maj.-Gen. Philip Effiong signed an unconditional surrender today, formally ending Biafra's 32-month secession.

He pledged support for a single Nigeria on behalf of his people and then embraced Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon, the federal head of state.

Gowon promised a general amnesty and protection for former Biafrans and said:

"We know most of you are dragged into it . . . We can certainly say that this is the end of the war."

Effiong and three other secessionist officers signed the brief surrender document accepting the present 12-state structure of Nigeria which started Lt.-Col. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu's secession in May, 1967.

AS SURPRISE

They met at Dodan barracks, the heavily-guarded general headquarters where Gowon also lives. A five-man Biafran delegation slipped into Lagos, but Effiong's presence came as a surprise.

Effiong took over Biafra's leadership during the weekend after Maj.-Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu, who had led the secessionist province since the start, fled the territory.

In a message from a secret hideout and distributed in Geneva, Ojukwu accused the Nigerians of seeking to bring an iron curtain down around Biafra in order to carry out genocide. He appealed for a neutral force to intervene.

Ojukwu also appealed to the world to help Biafrans who he said were left starving and exhausted by the war.

Reliable sources said the five-man Ibo team received from Gowon renewed assurances for the welfare and security of the Ibos in Nigeria. The Ibos are the main tribe in Biafra.

The Biafran delegation flew into Lagos from Port Harcourt earlier in the day to open armistice talks, and official sources in Lagos said the main subject of first negotiations would be Ibo security and welfare.

There will be no tallks yet about constitutional arrangements under which Biafra will resume a place in the Ni-

Second Look Taken At Tax Reform Plans

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Edgar Benson today said his tax reform program would not increase inflation significantly if adopted.

But his reply to questions from the Commons finance committee's first hearing on the program contained a hint that he will submit a supplementary White Paper soon amending some of the proposals in his original outlined tabled last November.

Robert Kaplan (L—Toronto-Don Valley) said there was some concern on how proposed changes would hit the small businessman.

Benson said the matter is open to further study and "we're interested in studying all aspects, and will pay attention to submissions in this regard."

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said the minister has been quoted as saying some sections of the white paper already had been recognized as unworkable. He asked whether Benson could say which ones.

Benson said three areas for possible further study came to mind: the problem of periodic valuation of shares in widely-held corporations, the status of investments in less-developed countries before signing of tax treaties with those countries, and taxing the unbilled time of professionals.

Not Dealing For Arctic

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today gave opposition-requested assurance that Canada would not give the United States any degree of control over its water resources, including the Arctic, in exchange fo bigge Ameircan puchases of Canadian oi.

Truedau gave the assurance in the Commons in erpy to a 1 question by Geogre Hees, former Conservative trade minister.

4½ Cents Whittled From Consumer Dollar

But for those on fixed pensions or other forms of fixed income, $100 last month would buy only $95.60 worth of the goods and services most in demand among urban families.

These calculations result from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' announcement Wednesday that its consumer price index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, rose in December to 127.9 from 127.4 in November and 122.3 in December, 1968.

In percentage terms, the increase from December to December was 4.6 per cent. This showed some moderation, compared with the year-to-year increases of 5 per cent and more last summer.

Mister Benson is taxin' credulity along with other items.

MEN BANISH WOMAN

She Won't Shut Up

SHOREHAM ON SEA, England (Reuters) — Margaret Colquhoun talked so much at local council meetings here that her 12 male colleagues voted today to banish her.

By a 12-to-5 majority, the 41-year-old housewife was stripped of all her committee jobs.

Her opponents were led by Councillor Brian Phillips who said: "She's a bit of a gas bag."

Mrs. Colquhoun said there had been a plot to silence her because she was investigating council inefficiency and she promised she would disregard the ban.

"The 12 men think I'll be so humiliated I'll be reluctant to speak.

"Well they're wrong. If I wish to speak on an issue, I'm going to."

Young added that recent press reports indicated that the battle on public health lay between the provincial and federal governments "and we are the goats" he added.

The main bone of contention lies in the per capita costs to the various areas within the health board jurisdiction.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt are charged $2.79, $2.66 and $2.61 per capita respectively while Saanich and other areas pay only 30 cents per capita.

TAKE-OVER WANTED

For many months now all municipalities have been pressing for a regional take-over and a fair cost split between all participating areas.

Suggested as a formula was an 8-20 cost sharing program between province and region with the region raising its share via a $1 per capita levy.

To date the provincial government has rejected the formula and has indicated as recently as Wednesday that it will not consider any shuffles in the immediate future.

The out-of-kilter formula now in operation, plus the provincial government's lack of action in finding a solution, created the climate for Victoria's threatened pull-out.

In the preamble to the formal resolution calling for the formation of a separate health unit to serve the city, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, stated:

"The senior medical health officer has publicly expressed his grave concern with respect to the inadequacy of the numbers of staff provided by the government. . . .

"In order to compensate in part for such inadequacy members of the health department of the city are being deployed throughout the area in respect to health services for which the government is responsible.

"As a result health services available to the citizens of Victoria have seriously suffered."

A week today the finance committee will tell city council that enough is enough and recommend that:

- The city manager take immediate steps to confine the activities of the medical health officer (paid by the city) and other officers and employees of the city's health department to the boundaries of the city.
- That the city immediately cease to participate in the functions of the metro health board.
- That negotiations commence immediately with Oak Bay and Esquimalt with the view to re-forming the old Victoria-Esquimalt Union Board of Health.

Health board chairman Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, of the Saanich Peninsula School Board, said the health of people in an area is a provincial and federal responsibility, not a municipal one.

"If Victoria does this, really I can see their point. Their health services have been going down because of lack of staff, I don't blame them.

"But it will create a desperate situation for the outlying municipalities who are not able to expend this kind of money. I hope Victoria will give us some time," she said.

gerian federal system, they said. These will be reserved for a future constituent assembly of representatives from Nigeria's 12 states, the sources added.

The five-man armistice delegation was headed by Biafran Chief Justice Sir Louis Mbanefo. Other members were J. I. Emebolu, Biafran attorney-general; Prof. Eni Njoku, former vice-chancellor of Lagos University, Chief A. E. Bassey and E. Aguma.

HALTS OPERATIONS

They arrived a day after a federal announcement over captured Radio Biafra indicated that all organized Biafran resistance had collapsed. In the broadcast, Col. Olusegun Obasanjo, chief of the key 3rd Federal Division, said he had ordered all tactical troop movements to cease and had arranged for Nigerian police to take over maintenance of law and order throughout the Eastern state Biafra.

Aid to Fire Hall Snowballs to $1,400

The logging and fishing community on the east side of Graham Island, has a population of 325.

An appeal to the municipalities of Greater Victoria to help them find a new truck which could be purchased at a reasonable price, met with immediate response. Central Saanich, Langford and Sooke have made firm offers of used vehicles.

Mrs. Duncan Hooper, of Port Clements, who is spending the week with her mother, Mrs. G. R. Burton, 970 Cowichan, said the community plans to raise between $10,000 and $15,000 towards a new fire hall and truck.

Oronsay Passengers Sought in Victoria

Any Greater Victoria resident or visitor who was aboard the quarantined cruise liner Oronsay in Vancouver should get in touch with the nearest office of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health for immediate medical examination.

Anyone with the disease would have to be admitted to hospital for treatment, said Dr. Whitbread.

And anyone who has been in contact with someone ill with typhoid would have to be quarantined for examination as possible victims or carriers of the disease.

He described the disease as very severe, communicable and potentially fatal.

Symptoms include a swinging temperature between 99 and 104 degrees, headache, nausea, abdominal pain, diarrhea or constipation, rash all over the body, malaise and severe weakness.

Copper Curb Won't Affect Province

Tighter federal control of export copper effective this week should not affect the B.C. copper mining industrys large dependence on the world market, two mining spokesmen said today.

Tighter federal control of export copper effective this week should not affect the B.C. copper mining industrys large dependence on the world market, tow mining spokesmen said today.

However, it remains unclear whether the federal export controls imposed Tuesday apply to scrap and refined copper, to copper ore concentrates, or to all.

If applicable only to finished copper and scrap, the order does not affect the B.C. mining industry, which has no copper refineries and relies on the world market for sales of its concentrates mostly to Japan.

R. W. Falkins, president of Highmont Mining Corp. Ltd., Vancouver, said B.C. producers have always had to obtain export permits for concentrates and felt that the new orders apply only to integrated mining-smelting producers in eastern Canada.

SIMPLE CASE

"I don't think they (U.S. authorities) are terribly unhappy if these guys don't get into the armed forces. That includes Americans and non-Americans as well.

"That's my personal view.

"It makes it easier if they don't have a lot of guys bitching with their officers and sticking up for their rights."

Olah said he was persecuted by U.S. authorities on the basis of his nationality.

In Ottawa Gordon Fairweather, Progressive Conservative spokesman on external affairs, promised to ask the govenment for an explanation of policy on Canadians who become involved with U.S. draft laws.

NO HELP

Olah earlier said he received no assistance from the Canadian consulate in San Francisco.

The Olahs were not smiling very much at a press conference held for them Wednesday afternoon at the University of Victoria.

Events of the last four months, and particularly the last four days, had left them emotionally drained.

"I just want to forget the whole thing," said quietly, seated next to the slender, attractive Ontario-born girl he married last month.

"We've gone through a lot in the last four months."

"It started last August when he and Linda left Brampton, Ont., to visit his father, who was ill in San Francisco.

REUNITED

It ended Monday when he and Linda were re-united in Victoria after a nerve-wracking flight from San Francisco.

His ordeal started when police in San Francisco picked him up in August for an old $2 traffic violation. He was indicted on a charge of failing to report for induction into the U.S. armed forces, with his case due to be heard Feb. 12.

Freed on $1,000 bail which his father raised, he was stabbed in mid-November when he and a friend were held up in San Francisco's Filmore district.

He was on the critical list for three days, and Linda, who had returned to Brampton to work and raise money for his bail, flew to San Francisco to be with him.

They were married Dec. 6 and lived with friends.

REST QUIETLY

It was too soon Wednesday for them to say how they plan to resume living normally. For the time being they just want to rest quietly at a cottage near Victoria.

If he returned to the United States—he doesn't intend to—the young photographer would face charges including draft evasion, fleeing prosecution and bail-jumping.

Olah said Wednesday the only way he could be returned to the U.S. would be if Ottawa co-operated with the FBI in extradition proceedings.

The couple plans to live in anonymity for some time, they said, because FBI agents posing as RCMP officers have been known to harrass American and Canadian draft-dodgers here.

Asked what assistance he had received from the Canadian consulate in San Francisco, Olah replied emphatically:

"None whatsoever."

"I did learn one thing — that there are many other Canadians who are in the same predicament as I was."

When he contacted the consulate he was told that since 1967 it has not been policy to help people involved with the draft.

When he enrolled for a year at a San Francisco high school in 1966 — he was living with his father and step-mother at the time — he was told by school officials he could not graduate unless he enlisted in the draft.

He was not permitted to sign a form stating he did not intend to become an American citizen — the form would have exempted him from the draft.

When indicted for failing to answer his draft call the judge took the unusual step of setting bail at $2,500. It was later dropped to $1,000, but the usual procedure with American draft resistors is to release them on their own recognizance.

FIVE YEARS

The draft-resisting charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

Asked what his chances of aquittal would have been had he remained in San Francisco he said:

"When you consider the fact that I had been fraudulently drafted, then it stands to reason they would have lied on the stand.

"Don't forget this is a country where they gagged and tied a black man in a courtroom," he added, referring to Black Panther leader Bobby Seale, tried last fall in Chicago on conspiracy charges.

He said he had considered fleeing the U.S. before he was contacted by Wright last Saturday, but his chances of success didn't seem very real, especially since he had no money.

FIRST REACTION

Wright had praise for the individuals who co-operated in the rescue of the Olahs. They included persons who loaned him $800 to fly south, students to man phones in Vancouver and Victoria, drivers standing by, ready to cross the U.S. border during a possible emergency, and friends in San Francisco.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Temperatures remained below zero in the central and northern interior today. It was also well below breezing in the extreme southern interior as the cold Arctic air deepens and continues southward into the U.S. Light snow flurries which have been widespread overnight continued today.

On the coast skies were mostly sunny today with only a few showers of rain or snow and these mainly in northern areas.

By Friday a disturbance from the southwest will be near the coast. Rain and snow is forecast for southwestern B.C. Friday with the rain reaching the lower mainland about midday. The disturbance will also drop more snow in the southern interior Friday night.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

One of my friendliest acquaintances phoned me from Montana last week, and he fairly blew the climate into the phone as he described the blizzard that was raging at that very moment. He was warm and cosy, he said, in his cabin on the Gallatin River, and he didn't expect to feel the severe cold when it came down because he would build an inner heat by thinking of his experiences in the Sahara Desert during the Second World War.

The Saharan heat in summertime is intense, he said, and just the thought of it was enough to melt all the snow in the vicinity of the cabin. In the Sahara, the temperature in the daytime goes up to 120, and at night, even though the air temperature declines, the ground and the buildings have never a chance to cool off and are hot as Hades.

He said that when he was in the Sahara and roasting he helped himself to withstand the onslaught of heat by thinking of the frigid cold of a winter night on the Montana plains.

DASHING NIGHT FOR PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau sailed gracefully over the ice of the Governor-General's skating rink Wednesday night with a beautiful young redhead on his arm.

She was Margaret Sinclair, 22, daughter of former federal fisheries minister James Sinclair, and the same girl the prime minister took out to dinner in Vancouver last August.

Miss Sinclair said last year that she and the prime minister met in Tahiti and that they were "just friends."

Wednesday, they were among the guests at Governor-General Michener's annual skating party for MPs and senators, held at the outdoor rink on Government House grounds.

WEARS RACCOON COAT

Miss Sinclair wore a tweed maxi-skirt and a fur jacket, a knitted hat and scarf.

Governor-General Michener was among the more active skaters. He wore a Canadian Ski Patrol jacket—he's the honorary patron of the patrol—and ski pants. Also present, but not skating, was a well-muffled-up Mrs. Michener.

Close to 100 MPs and senators braved near-zero temperatures to come to the party, which wound up with hot win, a buffet and dancing, inside Government House.

RC Aid To Poor Urged

Canadian Roman Catholics will be urged to contribute 3 to 5 per cent of their income to help the poor here and abroad.

Parishes and dioceses will also be asked for similar contributions of their ordinary and gross annual incomes as a sign of leadership to the federal government.

The moves were disclosed by Bishop Remi De Roo of Victoria who is attending a western conference of priests in Winnipeg this week.

This is an organization of Roman Catholic priests in western Canada with 300 members, a free association not to be confused with any official church structure, it was said.

CELIBACY

On another matter, a resolution that "priestly celibacy be made optional for priests in the Latin rite" was approved with 82 in favor, 45 in favor but with reservations, 28 against and 17 abstaining.

Bishop De Roo said this was "just a restatement of a resolution they have made before."

A resolution on military chaplaincy was introduced and later withdrawn.

The conference was asked to resolve that "as a sign of hope to a war-weary world," the church renounce military uniforms, rank and government pay for its chaplains to the armed services.

An objection was raised by Rev. Francis Swoboda, a Canadian forces chaplain from Esquimalt, who said "the men in the field, the sailor aboard ship, do not consider clergymen in the black suit and the white collar with the same confidence they would give to a man who is part of them, who is part of the service."

The consensus was that the issue was too complicated for swift passage of a resolution which had not been thoroughly studied.

The special guest at the meeting will be H. J. "Pat" Barron, of Nanaimo, who recently spent several years flying for Mexican commercial airlines. Private pilots from the Island will tell of their experiences flying in Mexico and give tips for those who wish to fly there.

RAISE CHINCHILLAS WITH CANADA'S LARGEST CHINCHILLA MARKETING ASSOCIATION

CHINCHILLA has long been recognized as one of the world's most valuable furs. The velvety softness and light weight of chinchilla has contributed to the spectacular growth of this industry, and the demand for top quality pelts far exceeds the supply.

INCOME — Commercial pelting has become a reality. The Chinchilla "Guild" provides all ranchers a written contract wherein their chinchilla offspring are purchased by the "Guild" at a minimum guaranteed price. The "Guild's" contract also provides a sire exchange program controlled by IBM machines.

CONVENIENCE — Chinchillas are generally raised in basements and spare rooms, as they are among the cleanest of animals, odor free, quiet and gentle.

CARE AND FEEDING — Chinchillas cost less than $3.00 a year to feed and second income families in their spare time produce most of the pelts sold on today's market. You too, can share in the millions of dollars being earned by these people throughout the world.

SERVICE — Force priming, grading, killing, pelting dressing and marketing are provided by the "Guild" including ranch inspection, training seminars and delivery of related equipment and supplies.

INVESTMENT — The chinchilla business is one of the easiest and least costly in which to get started. Qualifies for bank financing. Your down payment need not be large (as modest as $495.00). Chinchilla ranching also provides special tax advantages. If you are facing retirement, or in need of a second income and fond of animals, let us show you why "CHINCHILLA" can be a sound investment.

I am interested in an additional income of:

$2,500 ☐ $5,000 ☐

$7,500 ☐ $10,000 ☐ per year

The Government makes the tax rules.

Start using them and save some money.

You can save up to $2,500 a year of your earned income, watch your money grow, and still have control of it.

The government says in effect "Plan now for your retirement, and we'll allow you to pay as much as $2,500 into a registered retirement savings plan. And we won't tax you on it."

So you merely lower your taxable income by investing up to $2,500 in our registered retirement savings plans.

You save on tax.

And it's not dead. It grows.

For instance, suppose you had invested in our Equity Plan just seven years ago.

By now your money would have more than doubled. (If you're already in a plan and its growth rate can't compare with ours, come on over!).

We also offer you an alternative plan, which guarantees a rate of interest established at the first of March each year.

That's definitely not dead money.

When you withdraw it, of course, you have to pay taxes on it at that time. But this is exactly what's most important.

You pay tax on the money when you choose to pay it.

This has led some to call the plan a tax shelter.

One fellow we know paid into it for five years, watched it grow, then took the bundle out and used it to replace normal income while he lazed in Majorca for six months.

If you care to, you can leave it in till you retire for good.

Either way it's an excellent plan for you.

It's especially valuable because we don't have a lot of salesmen out making calls, therefore you don't have to pay high sales commissions.

All you have to do is call us.

But don't put it off.

The deadline is the end of February. You can't declare any contributions for 1969 after this date.

Do it now.

Fight fire with fire.

Fields

Agreement to merge Fields Stores Ltd. and Hamilton Harvey Ltd. through share exchange has been reached, subject to conditions. The former operates a B.C. chain of department stores and family clothing stores and the latter has two lower mainland department stores.

Fields president Joseph Segal said his firm will acquire 68 per cent of Hamilton Harvey's outstanding common shares on the basis of one Fields for 2¼ Hamilton Harvey. These shares are held by Robert Porter and Osborne McKee, chairman and president of Hamilton Harvey.

An offer would then be made to the remaining Hamilton Harvey shareholders to exchange their holdings on the same basis.

Fields has also bought for cash the family clothing business of McKees Ltd., with three stores in Vancouver.

Boeing Co.

The Boeing Co. work force will decline by a total of about 18,000 persons in the Puget Sound area in 1970, a company spokesman said.

Employment at the aircraft firm totalled about 101,500 here at its peak in 1968 and has been declining at an average of about 1,200 persons per month.

Vice-President Lowell P. Mickelwait blamed the decline on slower commercial aircraft sales, failure to win new government contracts coupled with reduced government spending, virtual completion of the government contracts it holds, and increased productivity in the 747 jumbo jet assembly lines.

Great Canadian

Problems have returned to hamper production at the Fort McMurray refinery of Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd.

The plant is operational, but during the last quarter there were shutdowns caused by difficulties in the plant's process area and output was about 2.6 million barrels, compared with 10 million barrels for the full year, or double 1968 production, when serious difficulties were encountered.

Laurentide

Laurentide Financial Corp. Ltd. has announced it has extended to Feb. 16 the date for acceptance of its offer to purchase all outstanding common shares and participating non-voting second preference shares in Union Acceptance Corp. Ltd.

The offer, made Dec. 9, is for $7 cash per share for each of the two classes of Union Acceptance stock.

In extending the date beyond Jan. 15 closing date, Laurentide said it now owns 87.7 per cent of the combined outstanding common and second preference shares of UAC.

Air Canada

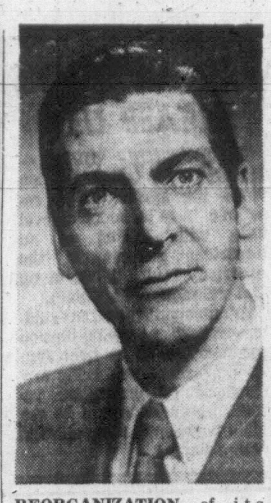
Yves Pratte, chairman and chief executive officer of Air Canada, said the airline will make a small profit on 1969 operations — the 16th time in the last 19 years that a profit has been recorded.

A number of adverse factors affected revenues, among them a 28-day strike last spring, and a rise in labor costs by 7 per cent over those of 1968.

Interprovincial

Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corp. Ltd., reports a net profit for 1969 of $534,037, on the highest sales volume in its history.

The company's annual report said the profit compared with $415,240 in 1968. Its highest recored net profit was $3.4 million in 1966.



REORGANIZATION of its building materials division has been completed by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., which is carrying on under the new title of MacMillan Bloedel Building Materials Ltd. R. A. Swannell (above), formerly business development manager, has been appointed regional manager of the new operations in western Canada. C. M. Dee is general manager of the subsidiary, formerly Canada Building Materials.

U.S. Reported Set to Change Policy on Oil

CALGARY (CP) — President Gene E. Roark of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada said Wednesday he has been notified that President Nixon will be advised to impose a quota of 615,000 barrels a day on imports from Canada effective next Jan. 1.

Roark, president of Husky Oil Ltd., said in an interview he received the information in a telephone call from Washington.

Canada was expected to export an average of 759,000 barrels a day to the U.S. in the first quarter of 1970.

The figures reported by Roark differ from earlier reports from Washington which said a staff committee had urged a U.S. cabinet task force which has been reviewing oil import policy to advise President Nixon to replace the existing U.S. import policy July 1.

Roark said he was told the latest proposal is to control one-third of imports by the application of tariffs during 1971, two thirds during 1972, with the full system of tariff controls taking over Jan. 1, 1973.

Roark said there was no mention made of any penalty to canada if the Canadian quota was exceeded.

Broker, Swiss Bank Indicted in U.S.

NEW YORK (WP) — A former officer of one of the country's largest brokerage firms was indicted Wednesday, along with a Swiss bank and its general manager, or charges of using the bank to violate U.S. securities laws.

The indictments, announced by U.S. attorney Robert M. Morgenthau, Mark the second time that a Swiss bank has been charged with breaking laws in this country. In 1968, the Arzi Bank, of Zurich, was indicted and subsequently convicted of securities violations.

The latest indictment charged that Andre Backar, former first vice-president of Shearson, Hammill and Co., Inc., conspired with the Wiesscredit, Banca Comerciale D'Investmenti, Chiasso, Switzerland, and Rolando Zoppi, the bank's general manager, to extend more than $3 million in illegal credit to customers.

RESIGNED

Shearson, Hammill is the eigth or ninth largest brokerage firm in the country. Backar, who became a first vice-president and voting stockholder in the firm in July, 1968, resigned at the end of last year.

According to the indictment, Backar, who was formerly a member of the Tunisian mission to the United Nations, opened an account at Shearson, Hammill, in the name of the Weiscredit bank, in September, 1966. He then arranged for customers to open accounts at the bank which arranged credit terms calling for payment of as little as 20 per cent of the purchase price of securities. Federal Reserve Board rules require stock buyers to pay at least 80 per cent of the purchase price.

The indictment said that Backar accepted buy and sell orders for the customers, in the name of the bank. After the orders were executed, it said, Backar would notify the bank so that proper bookkeeping entries could be made. The bank paid for the security in full, concealing the financial arrangement it had made with that customer. In all, it said, more than $3 million in credit was extended to the customers.

Jumbo Jet Must Be Modified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boeing 747 jumbo jet failed part of its emergency test and cannot be used commercially until modifications are made, the Federal Avaition Administration said Wednesday—one week before the plane is scheduled to go into regular service for Pan America World Airways.

Modifications will have to be completed and the evacuation procedure approved by the FAA within a week if the plane is to enter scheduled service as planned next Wednesday.

Pan Am had announced that the FAA approved the evacuation procedure after a test at Roswell, N.M., Tuesday in which 370 persons were evacuated from the airplane in 87 seconds.

However, the FAA said later two of the 11 evacuation chutes on the 747 would have to be modified satisfactorily before passengers can be carried.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Time to Think About That April Tax Return

This is a service provided by The Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

By Edgar A. Downey, C. A.

You can file your 1969 individual income tax returns now if you have the necessary information.

There is a vast number of people who have a salary or wages from only one job as their sole source of income. If they have their T4 slip showing the totals for income and tax and pension deductions then they probably have all the data required to prepare their own T1 tax return.

At least it would be worthwhile to take a quick look at the figures. Then, anyone who has a refund to come should make up the return and send it in quickly. The sooner it is filed the sooner it will be processed and the refund cheque could be received within a few weeks.

Most people in such a position usually have no complications in their tax return and can quickly make their own calculations of the same basis as in prior years. There were no significant changes in the rules for 1969 except for the minor increase in the tax calculation which is clearly shown in the form.

However, it is often these very same people who overlook the fact that their paycheque is not really their sole source of income. The interest on their bank savings account is also income and it is subject to tax. With the higher rates of interest paid by the banks in the past year that interest income may be fairly substantial, and it will show up in a T5 slip which the bank will issue by February 28.

Interest on Canada Savings bonds is also income subject to tax and that has already been reported to the Tax Department when the bondholder cashed the coupons and signed the ownership certificates at the bank.

The fact that some people think that interest on government bonds should not be subject to tax does not change the fact that all interest is taxable income, and your own tax return is not the place to carry the banner for tax reform.

Fortunately, in Canada, taxation is imposed by Parliament not by the tax department. So it is futile to blame the tax assessor who merely applies the law as it is set out in the Income Tax Act.

In any event, most tax returns are now assessed by the computer machine, which is sometimes called the "Iron Maiden", and the machine really is impartial.

The recent news reports dealing with the proposed changes in taxation which were announced in the White Paper on Tax Reform do not apply to 1969, and do not in any way affect the individual tax returns which must be filed by April 30, 1970.

Those people who do not yet have their T4 slips cannot do very much about it yet unless they have kept their own detailed records. It is possible to file a tax return without the corresponding T4 slips as long as the information is correctly reported but it is not likely to speed up the refund until the computer has received its copy of the slip to match against the reported income.

Most businesses require time to complete their records for the calendar year so the rules provide two months for them to do this. Employers must report, on or before February 28, 1970, all salaries, wages, commissions, etc., paid in 1969, and give the T4 slip copy of the report to the individual employee. All dividends and interst paid in 1969 must also be reported by that same date and the T5 slip copy must be sent to the individual investor. Of course, some businesses do this long before and so some people can prepare their own tax returns early.

Even if you cannot obtain all your information yet, now is a good time to start gathering it together. Remember the April 30 deadline for personal tax returns, it will come faster than you think.

Victoria Developed From First Bay Fort

By HUMPHRY DAVY

It's no exaggeration to say that Victoria was built around the Hudson's Bay Company which this year is commemorating its 300th anniversary.

And it is no exaggeration to say the company in Victoria, now familiarly known as The Bay, played a major part in creating British Columbia and making Alaska an American state.

In fact, the whole of the Pacific Northwest was largely shaped by the activities of the company which once exercised imperial power over most of Canada.

It all started when the company's able lieutenant, James Douglas, later to become the first governor of the province, chose Victoria as a site for a fort and trading post in 1843.

Douglas had been instructed by Governor Sir George Simpson to establish a new coastal depot because Britain was expected to cede the Oregon territories to the United States, then controlled by the company. A location on Vancouver Island was suggested.

After surveying the Island's coast, Douglas, it seemed, chose Victoria for its agricultural rather than for its fur and military potential. It's climate also impressed him.

In a report to a senior official, Douglas described the vegetation at Victoria as "more luxuriant than other places I have seen in America, indicating a productive soil."

His choice proved a wise one.

The company's venture into farming, apart from trading beads and blankets for furs, enabled the depot to be self-sufficient and also to provide it with commodities for sale to trading vessels.

The productive land also attracted settlers to the area, thus ensuring that the settlement would continue to expand.

HIT RUSSIANS

At that time, the company was involved in a life and death struggle with Russia for control of the Pacific Northwest fur trade.

It first cornered a large part of the trade by establishing posts around the headwaters of larger rivers which emptied in northern Pacific waters. Pelts which normally were taken down the rivers by Indians to Russian trading posts on the coast, such as Sitka, were acquired by the company.

To make matters worse for the Russians, they were entirely dependent for their food supplies on outside sources and actually bought agricultural products from the company's Victoria farms.

The situation became intolerable. They were being "skinned" and fed by their rivals. Finally in 1867 Russia sold Alaska to the United States.

Today, the company can justly claim that Alaska would be a part of the Soviet Union if it had lost the pelt war.

ONCE FARMED

In this age it's hard to believe the company with its large department store on Douglas street was once heavily engaged in farming in the Greater Victoria area.

The Bay's first farm — about five acres — was started when the fort was constructed on a site known today as Bastion Square. It was situated near the depot.

Two years later in 1846, company employees had developed several farms which produced oats, wheat, barley, peas and potatoes.

In all, there were about 160 acres under cultivation but within a few years this was explanded to more than 4,000 acres. There were also three dairy farms, each with 70 milch cows, and a sheep farm at Lakehall with 1,700 sheep. Horses were also bred.

By 1854 Victoria's population was about 432 and most people were dependent on the company.

Employees were engaged in administration, trading, store keeping, farming, lumbering and a host of other jobs.

FORTUNES CHANGED

The company's fortunes changed in 1858 when Victoria became the principal point of entry for thousands of prospectors on their way to the Fraser River gold fields.

Victoria really then began to build around the Bay. It is estimated that 20,000 gold miners landed in the city that year.

As the large influx of settlers and miners required services and goods, the Bay concentrated on the wholesale business and navigation.

In 1859, the company built a warehouse five storey's high with a basement and a sub-basement, to hold merchandise, stocks of food and ammunition. It stood on Wharf Street and for years was a famous landmark.

Around this time, too, the fort was torn down. It had served its purpose.

Farming also gradually ceased to be important and the land was sold to settlers.

It was also during this period that the company became heavily involved in shipping and ran a regular service between the Fraser River and the city.

FAMOUS SHIP

Two of the vessels on this route were the Beaver and the Otter. The former was the most famous because it was the first steamship to operate off the Pacific Northwest coast.

The Beaver in 1843 also brought Douglas to Victoria to superintend the construction of the fort.

The company for a short while also operated a service to San Francisco but this was discontinued when the Labourchere was wrecked on her second voyage.

There was keen rivalry in the shipping business between the company and the Pioneer Line, headed by Capt. John Irving. The rivals finally merged and formed the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company, known for years as the CPN.

SOLD TO CPR

The company in 1901 sold its shipping interest to the Canadian Pacific Railway, thus severing a long link with the past. For nearly 60 years its ships had plied coastal waters and tied up behind the store and warehouse on Wharf Street.

The company's next big enterprise in the city was the construction of a modern department store on Douglas and Fisgard. Construction started in 1912, but the war of 1914-18 intervened and it was not completed until September 19, 1921.

The building was enlarged in 1929 and in 1959 the parkade was added to the building.

So over a period of 128 years, the Bay in Victoria, was involved in trading beads for pelts, farming, real estate, wholesale, shipping and now retailing.

ESKIMOS FEAR STARVATION

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Oil exploration in the Arctic should be halted or at least slowed down, an Eskimo member of the Northwest Territories council said Wednesday.

Simonie of Baffin Island, elected member for the Eastern Arctic, said the possibility of oil discoveries threaten the existence of the Eskimo and the wildlife upon which their survival depends.

•

Eskimos, he said, are concerned about tankers taking oil from the Arctic. A tanker cracked by a collision with ice could release a slick which would be deadly to wildlife for miles around.

"I know ... starvation is coming. But we're not ready for this yet. They don't care about animals. All they think about is taking oil from the ground."

WARSAW TALKS PLEASE U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nixon administration views the agreement to resume ambassadorial-level talks with Peking as an important success in the American effort to warm up U.S. relations with China.

Administration sources said, however, they have no illusion the meeting, to be held Jan. 20 in Warsaw, will bring any dramatic or immediate results. The session will be the 135th between the two sides in recent years.

Gov't Grows Safely

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said today the provincial government is being "very careful" in allowing any increases in the size of its establishment.

He said the B.C. government hasn't followed the lead of the federal government in actually reducing numbers trying to reduce numbers of civil servants but he warned that the existing staff can expect to spread their efforts over a wider work area.

"We must understand thoroughly the consequences of unreasonable wage demands" associated with inflationary pressures, Loffmark said in expanding on remarks made Wednesday when he said no to a request for increased health inspection staff from the Greater Victoria area.

Loffmark said Wednesday that decreases in services will follow from wage or staff demands in excess of productivity or of the community's ability to pay for the increases.

He made clear today in an interview that he was not suggesting cuts in the current level of services but only in relation to future needs. The same number of people may be required to handle growth service functions, he said.

Miles for Millions Organizers Divide Up $70,000 Aid Bankroll

Miles for Millions organizers today signed a cheque for $70,000 to begin distribution of funds raised last Nov. 15.

March chairman Lynne Brassington and treasurer Bruce McKean said while the fund is still $60,000 below the original $130,000 target, they don't want to hold back available funds until all the money is in.

They also said commitments to international agencies have become more urgent since the end of fighting in Biafra.

G. R. Pearkes Clinic	24%	$16,800
Queen Alexandra Solarium	10%	$ 7,000
Family and Children's Service	8%	$ 5,600
Detached worker program	8%	$ 5,600
National Walk Committee	16.67%	$11,669

Oxfam of Canada	11.11%	$ 7,777
Canairelief	11.11%	$ 7,777

Chargex Abuse High In City Says Chief

He was commenting on one of the topics discussed by police chiefs of 12 B.C. municipalities, meeting in Victoria Wednesday to draft briefs for Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

"Pretty well every day we have some kind of fraud involving Chargex reported to us," said Gregory.

Most common complaints involve misrepresentation and theft.

The increasingly large number of credit cards in circulation is compounding the problem, he said.

The chiefs made it clear that the provincial government's ban on most juvenile prosecutions is still a major source of discontent with them.

"One subject that has caused much concern to all those attending is the Attorney-General's two-year-old policy of not charging juveniles with infractions of city bylaws and provincial statutes such as the Motor Vehicle Act and the Liquor Act, unless special permission has been granted from the Attorney-General in each instance," said Gregory.

Experiment a Failure

"The chiefs felt that after a two-year trial period, the experiment was not only a failure but has had an adverse effect on our young people."

To protect young people from acquiring a federal criminal record the province has severely restricted prosecutions and police have argued this has produced a nose-thumbing attitude among young offenders.

Another topic discussed Wednesday was jurisdiction of police officers. Gregory explained that officers now have authority as policemen only within the county or municipality employing them. The chiefs want this extended to the province.

"In this day of rock and roll gatherings and campus unrest something might flare up where one force needs to ask for help from a neighboring one."

Another recommendation the chiefs will make is that the basis for reportable accidents be changed from those where damage is $100 or more to a minimum of $250.

All accidents with injuries would remain reportable.

Also discussed was the licensing of lotteries under recent ammendments to the criminal Code, the effect of the driver demerit system and of Criminal Code changes affecting restriction and prohibition of firearms.

Inquest Tonight On Mystery Death In Saanich Pond

An inquest opens tonight into the mystery death of Saanich high school student Douglas Hampton.

But coroner Edmond St. Jorre said today it will adjourn after hearing an identifying witness and from the doctor who pronounced death.

The inquest will continue in about 10 days, when Saanich police have had time to conclude their investigation and medical analysis completed by the Vancouver police laboratory, said the coroner.

Hampton, 18, disappeared on his way home from a Cordova Bay party Saturday night. His body was found at the edge of a weed-choked pond near Cordova Bay Road and Royal Oak Avenue Tuesday morning.

Preliminary indications were that he drowned but there has been a flurry of rumours that drugs were present at the Saturday night party.

Tonight's inquest sitting will allow St. Jorre to release the body for burial. The family plans a private service.

Government Eyeing Military For Marine Sections Control

By PAT DUFOUR

Depending on the results of a current survey, all marine sections of federal departments may be placed under the control of the Canadian armed forces Charles Lafontaine, 41, of Ottawa said today.

Deputy chief of personnel (civilian), department of national defence, Lafontaine is in Victoria as part of a B.C. tour of establishments.

"They are evaluating the value of a one-navy conception in which the department of transport vessels, department of fisheries ships and other marine facilities would all come under one head."

Lafontaine added that if the unification step was taken the various departments would have a consolidated and stronger voice.

LAFONTAINE

"It would probably be much more effective and priorities of the various requirements would be better determined."

He also predicted that if the consolidation takes place it could mean an addition of 5,000 civilian personnel to the work force of the Esquimalt base.

Lafontaine said that the marine section of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police might be the one exception.

SPECIAL SECURITY

The survey is being carried out by a three-man committee appointed by the Cabinet last fall. Heading the committee is Louis Audet, chairman of the maritime Commission.

The other two members are Capt. Eric Brand, former director of operations for the department of transport, and Robert Martin, assistant secretary of the Treasury Board.

NOT IN FAVOR

DOT district manager Larry Slaght said today that he would not be in favor of a complete amalgamation of civilian and armed forces fleets.

He said that a more centralized system could result in better economy "but I would prefer to see an armed forces wing and a civilian one."

Slaght added, "There are some advantages to be gained, particularly by smaller departments like the department of fisheries and the hydrographic people.

BETTER OPPORTUNITIES

"It would provide better opportunities for career development and there would be economies in the field of refits and other cross-servicing."

In Vancouver, W. R. Hourston, director of the Pacific region for the department of fisheries had reservations.

"It all depends on what package deal they come up with. A task force was out here and we had some dialogue with them. I hope we'll have a chance to speak to their final recommendations."

Hourston added that each department had its variety of functions for its fleet. "During the fishing season our ships are out seven days a week. I wouldn't want to see their flexibility affected."

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me where I can send our used Christmas cards so that they can be of some use? R.H.

A. The Salvation Army in Indonesia uses cards in their mission work. These should be kept intact, not cut, and parcelled with a hole cut in the outer wrapping for postal inspection purposes. A notation on the outside should read Used Christmas Cards Only. The parcel should be addressed to Lt.-Col. Gladys Callis, Bala Keselamatan (Indonesian for Salvation Army), Djalan Djawa 16, Bandung, Djawa, Indonesia.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

UNESTEEMED

Contributed by a friend of Douglas Hampton.

He gave his gentle breath to the tiniest of flowers.

It was stolen.

He walked on.

The soothing winds swayed the flowers ever so gently all spring.

He passed by.

Winter came and the flowers were gone. Root gave way to mud.

He had died.

Project Sparks 'New Courage'

What are likely to be the basic needs of young people and adults in the world of the future?

What are likely to be the most urgent problems facing society in the future?

What should be the major purposes of education to meet these needs and problems?

What priority should be assigned to these purposes?

About 100 people — parents, students, teachers and school trustees — launched their own probe of these questions Wednesday night in Project Learning.

In six representative groups, they will meet regularly over the next few months in a broad debate which hopefully will tap all corners of the community.

A decade ago the public was in general agreement on what schools were for, says Dr. John Wiens, director of education for the Greater Victoria school board and the man behind Project Learning.

Not so today. Now there are increasingly divergent opinions — the liberals opposing the authoritarians, the university-oriented at odds with "daily life" oriented.

"But I think there's something going on in our community at this time which makes me hopeful.

"All the suspicions we have — we've got to get them together so they can see t'ain't so."

Does he really think his diverse committees can come up with the answers to the big questions on education?

"They may not come up with new ideas. But they may give us new momentum, new courage."

And in the process committee members at least will have a shot at one of the project purposes stated at their meeting in the Ewing Building Wednesday night.

That is to develop more effective communication among students, teachers, administrators, trustees and the general public.

Dr. Wiens says one of the factors which has made this sort of project rare in British Columbia has been the attitude of the department of education.

It apparently views such efforts as likely to "rock the boat." So government support has been lacking.

IT'S CURTAINS FOR CHAMBER'S BEDROOM LOOK

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant looked into the legislative chamber Wednesday, saw the off-white acoustic curtains covering the pink marble walls and promptly ordered them removed.

"Why, it looked like a bedroom in there" he said in ordering out the curtains installed by sound technicians.

The curtains were installed as part of an effort to improve the sound system in the chamber. A new speaker box is being suspended from the dome of the ceiling.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IT WAS, PERHAPS, A naughty act as cautious diplomacy looks on such matters. But this column salutes balding, bearded Norman Wright, who went down into Egypt and set a couple of our people free.

For Uvic Student Council President Wright, and for any unnamed shadows who may have assisted him in it, the cutting-out expedition was a gutsy and a risky one.

It might have landed venturesome Wright in the hands of the FBI, and conceivably in an American pokey.

Incidentally, the detached and even pious attitude ascribed to Canada's consulate in San Francisco toward a young Canadian impressed for U.S. military service surprises me.

★

What's the point of having diplomatic representation down there if it proves to be non-functional in one of its chief duties?

This is to assist Canadians who encounter difficulties. Olah alleges our consulate declined to concern itself in his case.

The American lawyer who was to handle the young man's defence appears to have been braver. As an individual, and in plain terms, he held an over-presumptuous draft board to be at fault for the attempted snatch.

In terms of population if not geographical extent, we are a little country in the lee of a mighty one. There's good in that fact, but there is also much that's bad. Industrially, we are both the beneficiaries and the victims of American conquest. For better or worse, it is not Britain or France, but the United States that sets our pace.

If you agree with me that being a carbon copy can be irksome, you may also share my unabashed satisfaction over the Wright raid.

It was impudent, it was dashing, it was successful. I suspect that pleased Victorians who relished a real-life adventure tale will take a cool view of any attempt to undo the deed.

I trust too that a deprived U.S. — which resented the grabbing of its own nationals enough to trigger the war of 1812 — will be a graceful loser!

IF YOU ARE EXPECTING a parcel sent by surface mail from overseas, have patience. Canadian Customs at Victoria is still working all-out to process what could wind up as the heaviest sending from the United Kingdom in its postal parcel section history.

The spate began with a very heavy pre-Christmas mail, and still continues. Staffers and extra hands have worked their way through sacks by the hundred. They aren't swamped, they staunchly declare, and the expect soon to have worked off the backlog.

Why the deluge? Nobody knows, but it's possible that better times in Britain may account for it at least in part.

Incidentally, surface mail from the UK arrives in Victoria in once-a-week lots. That's a pretty sound argument for air post, which drastically reduces the time from sender to recipient.

THERE ARE SOME ON whom the high cost of living lays a grievous burden. Here's a snatch from one of the letters I've received since the pending hike in power and bus rates was announced.

"I lost my husband over 12 years ago," this reader writes, "and my electricity rates are even more than they were when he was here. Then, I was cooking three meals a day, and washing once or twice a week, with a good deal of washing by hand in between. Now, when I do so much less, and seldom have more than one light on at a time, the charges are higher.

"By the time a person on a very limited budget pays for electricity, water, heating and telephone which is a necessity when you get older, live alone, and have to call the doctor in emergency, there isn't much left for anything else."

No comment, and none needed. Such letters speak for themselves.

That's it, except to convey a message from Stuart Fisher of 2254 Arbutus Road to the person unknown who found a plastic sack of school notebooks on rainy Tuesday night, and set it atop a mailbox at the Oak Bay-Foul Bay intersection.

Stuart, back-tracking next morning, found his books there.

"Without them, I'd be a dead duck," says he. "Many thanks!"
